UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

THE GRAY PANTHERS OF SAN FRANCISCO, et al.,

Plaintiffs,

No. C 09-2307 PJH

v.

ARNOLD SCHWARZENEGGER, et al.,

Defendants.

ORDER DENYING MOTION FOR PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION; ORDER GRANTING MOTION TO DISMISS

Plaintiffs' motion for a preliminary injunction and the motion of defendants Arnold Schwarzenegger and David Maxwell-Jolly to dismiss the complaint came on for hearing before this court on August 19, 2009. Plaintiffs appeared by their counsel Lynn S. Carman, Jessie M. Sandoval, and Stanley L. Friedman; and defendants appeared by their counsel Deputy Attorneys General Karin S. Schwarz and Joshua N. Sondheimer. Defendant John Chiang also appeared, by his counsel Daniel J. Powell.

Having read the parties' papers and carefully considered their arguments and the relevant legal authority, and good cause appearing, the court hereby DENIES the motion for preliminary injunction and GRANTS the motion to dismiss.

BACKGROUND

This is a case challenging the implementation of certain provisions of California Assembly Bill (AB) X3 5, Stats. 2009-2010., 3rd Exec. Sess., c.20 (AB 5). The challenged provisions, codified at California Welfare and Institutions Code § 14131.10(b)(1), eliminate payment under Medicaid, as of July 1, 2009, for certain "optional" Medicaid services.

Plaintiffs bring this action under the Supremacy Clause, Art. 6, cl. 2 of the United

1 States Constitution, seeking injunctive and declaratory relief. Plaintiffs allege that the 2 implementation of § 14131.10(b)(1) conflicts with the federal American Recovery and 3 Reinvestment Act of 2009 (“ARRA”), and that § 14131.10(b)(1) is therefore preempted.
 4 Plaintiffs now move for a preliminary injunction, and defendants move to dismiss the 5 complaint.

6 A. The Medicaid Act

7 Medicaid is a cooperative federal-state program that provides federal financial 8 assistance to participating states to reimburse certain costs of medical treatment for the 9 poor, elderly, and disabled. 42 U.S.C. § 1396. To qualify for federal matching funds, 10 known as the Federal Medical Assistance Percentage (FMAP),¹ a state must establish and 11 administer its Medicaid program through a state plan approved by the Secretary of Health 12 and Human Services (HHS). Id. § 1396a.

13 A state that participates in Medicaid must determine which services it will provide.
 14 See id. § 1396d(a). To receive federal approval, a state plan is required to include seven 15 enumerated medical services. Id. §§ 1396a(a)(10), 1396d(a)(1)-(5), (17), (21) (including as 16 mandatory: inpatient hospital, outpatient hospital, laboratory and x-ray, nursing facility, 17 physician, nurse-midwife, and nurse-practitioner services). A state may also elect to 18 provide optional services, such as dental services, prosthetics, and prescription drugs. See 19 id. §§ 1396a(a)(10)(A), 1396d(a).

20 The state must designate a “single state agency” to be responsible for administration 21 and supervision of the state plan. Id. § 1396a(a)(5). Once designated as the single state 22 agency for Medicaid, this agency may not delegate the administration of the program or 23 any activities related to rule-making and policy development to any entity other than its own 24 officials. 42 C.F.R. § 431.10(e). California participates in Medicaid through the Medi-Cal

 26
 27 ¹ FMAP is defined in the Medicaid Act as, “for any State[,] . . . 100 per centum less the 28 State percentage. . . .” The “State percentage” is “the percentage which bears the same ratio to 45 per centum as the square of the per capita income of such State bears to the square of the per capita income of the continental United States (including Alaska) and Hawaii” with some modifications. Id. § 1396d(b).

1 program, and has designated the Department of Health Care Services (DHCS) as the 2 single state agency responsible for administration of the Medi-Cal program. Cal. Welf. & 3 Inst. Code § 10740, 14000, et seq.

4 The receipt of federal funding is expressly conditioned on compliance with the 5 Medicaid Act, and HHS is authorized to withhold funds for noncompliance. 42 U.S.C.
6 § 1396c; see also 42 C.F.R. § 430.35. The Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services 7 (CMS) is the federal agency that administers the Medicaid program on behalf of the 8 Secretary of HHS. See Pharmaceutical Research & Mfrs. of America v. Walsh, 538 U.S.
9 644, 650 n.3 (2003).

10 B. Enactment of ABX3 5

11 At issue in the present action is the California Legislature's decision in February 12 2009, as part of its response to the State's fiscal emergency, to eliminate some (but not all) 13 of the optional benefits previously offered under Medi-Cal.

14 On December 19, 2008, the Governor of California declared a fiscal emergency and 15 directed the California legislature into a special session. The Governor noted that 16 there was an approximately $15 billion General Fund deficit for the 2008-2009 fiscal year 17 that, if unaddressed, would grow to $42 billion with the next 18 months. Therefore, the 18 Governor stated that "immediate and comprehensive action to reduce current spending 19 must be taken to ensure, to the maximum extent possible, that the essential services of the 20 State are not jeopardized and the public health and safety is preserved."

21 The Legislature enacted a series of budget measures in response, including, in 22 February 2009, ABX3 5 as urgency legislation to take effect immediately. ABX3 5, which 23 became effective on March 3, 2009, made a number of reductions to various state 24 programs. In the present action, plaintiffs challenge the provision codified as Welfare and 25 Institutions Code § 14131.10(b)(1), which "exclude[s] from coverage under the Medi-Cal 26 program," effective July 1, 2009, the following optional benefits: adult dental services, 27 acupuncture services, audiology services and speech therapy services, chiropractic 28 services, optometric and optician services, podiatric services, psychological services, and 1 incontinence creams and washes (“the nine Medicaid services”).

2 Dental services remain covered if they constitute “[m]edical and surgical services 3 provided by a doctor of dental medicine or dental surgery, which, if provided by a physician, 4 would be considered physician services, and which services may be provided by either a 5 physician or a dentist in this state.” Cal. Welf. & Inst. Code § 14131.10(b)(2).

6 In addition, the nine optional Medicaid services are covered if they are pregnancy-7 related; or if they are provided to beneficiaries under the Early and Periodic Screening 8 Diagnosis and Treatment Program, or provided to beneficiaries receiving long term care in 9 certain nursing facilities licensed by the State. Id. § 14131.10(b)(3) & (c). The State 10 anticipates that the implementation of § 14131.10(b)(1) will result in $129.4 million in 11 savings to General Fund expenditures in the 2009-2010 fiscal year.

12 C. The American Recovery and Reinvestment Act

13 Congress enacted ARRA on February 17, 2009. H.R. 1, 111th Cong., Pub. L. No.
14 111-5 (1st Sess. 2009). At issue here is a provision of Title V of ARRA. Title V provides 15 “state fiscal relief,” during a limited period of economic downturn (October 1, 2008 through 16 December 31, 2010). This “state fiscal relief” comes in seven forms – a temporary increase 17 in Medicaid FMAP payments, ARRA § 5001; a temporary increase in DSH
18 (disproportionate share hospitals) allotments during the recession, id. § 5002; an extension 19 of moratoria on certain Medicaid final regulations, id. § 5003; an extension of transitional 20 medical assistance, id. § 5004; an extension of the qualifying individual program, id.
21 § 5005; protections for Indians under Medicaid and CHIP, id. § 5006; and funding for 22 oversight and implementation, id. § 5007.

23 Congress expressly stated that the purposes of Title V are (1) “[t]o provide fiscal 24 relief to the States in a period of economic downturn[;]” and (2) “[t]o protect and maintain 25 State Medicaid programs during a period of economic downturn, including by helping to 26 avert cuts to provider payment rates and benefits or services, and to prevent constrictions 27 of income eligibility requirements for such programs, but not to promote increases in such 28 requirements.” Id. § 5000(a).

1 Under ARRA, qualifying states receive a general 6.2 percent increase in their FMAP, 2 and states with relatively high growth in unemployment rates receive additional increases 3 based on quarterly unemployment statistics. Id. § 5001(b), (c).

4 In order to receive enhanced FMAP, a state may not restrict eligibility “standards, 5 methodologies, or procedures” beyond those in effect on July 1, 2008. Id. § 5001(f)(1). In 6 addition, a state is also ineligible for enhanced FMAP “if any amounts attributable (directly 7 or indirectly) to such increase are deposited or credited into any reserve or rainy day fund 8 of the State.” Id., § 5001(f)(3).

9 D. CMS Guidance to States Regarding Implementation of ARRA

10 Since February 2009, CMS has issued several letters and fact sheets to assist the 11 states in complying with ARRA’s requirements. CMS has made clear that ARRA prohibits 12 states from restricting eligibility for Medicaid, as distinct from the medical services provided 13 under the Act. Thus, in a recent communication, CMS explained that a state could 14 eliminate Medicaid services without jeopardizing enhanced FMAP:

15 Question 19: Can States modify or eliminate services, as opposed to eligibility 16 criteria, and still qualify for the increased FMAP?

17 Answer: If the change in the service has no potential impact on an individual’s 18 ability to maintain Medicaid eligibility, such a change would not disqualify a State from the increased FMAP.

19 CMS, “American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009 - Frequently Asked Questions 20 from States, July 7, 2009,” attached as Exhibit A to Declaration of Toby Douglas, filed 21 herein on July 26, 2009, at 8; see also id. (response to Question 20: reduction in optional 22 services provided would not disqualify a State from receiving FMAP because no 23 beneficiaries would lose eligibility).

24 CMS has also explained that “[t]he availability of increased FMAP funding will 25 free-up State funds, which may be spent on activities that may or may not be related to the 26 Medicaid program.” Id. at 12 (“Answer” to Question 31); see also id. at 12-13 (“States may 27 use this freed up State money to fund other programs within the State, such as education, 28 or to maintain aspects of their Medicaid program that may have been previously cut due to 1 budgetary constraints.”).

2 E. Procedural Background

3 The present action was filed by six plaintiffs. Two are seriously disabled California
4 Medi-Cal beneficiaries – Mark Beckwith and Margaret Dowling. The third is an organization 5 that advocates on behalf of the elderly – The Gray Panthers of San Francisco. The 6 remaining three plaintiffs are nonprofit organizations that advocate for and provide health-7 care services to (among others) Medicaid beneficiaries – California Foundation for 8 Independent Living Centers, Inc., Independent Living Center of Southern California, Inc., 9 and Lifelong Medical Care.

10 Originally named as defendants were Arnold Schwarzenegger (“Schwarzenegger”), 11 Governor of California; Kim Belshé (“Belshé”), Secretary of California’s Health and Human 12 Services Agency; David Maxwell-Jolly (“Maxwell-Jolly”), Director of California’s Department 13 of Health Care Services (“DHCS”) and the State official responsible for the administration of 14 the MediCal program; John Chiang (“Chiang”), Controller of the State of California; Bill 15 Lockyer (“Lockyer”), Treasurer of the State of California; and Michael E. Genest (“Genest”), 16 Director of the California Department of Finance.

17 Plaintiffs filed the first amended complaint (“FAC”) on June 30, 2009, alleging four 18 causes of action. Plaintiffs subsequently dismissed the third cause of action, and also 19 dismissed defendants Belshé and Genest from the case.

20 In the first and second causes of action, plaintiffs seek to enjoin implementation of 21 Welfare & Institutions Code §14131.10(b)(1), on the grounds that the mandated cuts
22 conflict with two provisions of ARRA – the “purpose clause” (§ 5000(a)), and the provision 23 in § 5001(f)(3) that a state will be ineligible for increased FMAP if it deposits the enhanced 24 FMAP funds in a reserve or rainy day fund (§ 5001(f)(3)). In the fourth cause of action, 25 plaintiffs seek, in the event that injunctive relief is denied, a judicial declaration that 26 § 14131.10(b)(1) is contrary to and is preempted by ARRA.

27 Plaintiffs allege that the increased FMAP for the State of California for the 18-month
28 recession adjustment period will amount to an annual savings to the State of $6.6 billion

1 during the fiscal years 2008-2009 and 2009-2010. They contend that the annual cost to the 2 State to furnish the nine Medicaid services is $124.6 million – a small percentage of the 3 total the State will be receiving in enhanced FMAP funds.

4 Plaintiffs now seek a preliminary injunction, and Schwarzenegger and Maxwell-Jolly 5 seek an order dismissing the complaint for failure to state a claim and for lack of subject 6 matter jurisdiction.

7 DISCUSSION

8 A. Motion for Preliminary Injunction

9 In their motion for preliminary injunction, plaintiffs seek an order enjoining 10 enforcement of the reductions mandated by § 14131.10(b)(1), and requiring defendants to 11 “use and deploy the savings” resulting from the enhanced FMAP reimbursements under 12 ARRA to avert such cuts. In the event that defendants do not restore the nine Medicaid 13 services, plaintiffs seek an order requiring them to refrain from accepting any additional 14 enhanced FMAP funds, and to return all such funds already received.

15 1. Legal Standard

16 Plaintiffs seeking a preliminary injunction in a case in which the public interest is 17 involved must establish that they are likely to succeed on the merits, that they are likely to 18 suffer irreparable harm in the absence of preliminary relief, that the balance of equities tips 19 in their favor, and that an injunction is in the public interest. California Pharmacists Ass'n v.
20 Maxwell-Jolly, 563 F.3d 847, 849 (9th Cir. 2009) (citing Winter v. Natural Resources 21 Defense Council, Inc., 129 S.Ct. 365, 376 (2008)); see also Munaf v. Geren, 128 S.Ct.
22 2207, 2218-19 (2008).

23 2. Plaintiffs' Motion

24 Plaintiffs argue that they meet all the requirements for preliminary injunctive relief.
25 First, they assert that they have established a likelihood of success on the merits of the first 26 and second causes of action. With regard to the first cause of action, they contend that the 27 language of § 5000(a) compels the conclusion that a state that accepts enhanced FMAP 28 amounts under ARRA may not allow the savings it achieves to “sink into the State’s

1 fungible assets” and, at the same time, eliminate services to its Medicaid beneficiaries; but 2 must, rather, employ the savings resulting from the enhanced FMAP funds to avoid having 3 to cut its own Medicaid services during the period of economic downturn.

4 With regard to the second cause of action, plaintiffs argue that § 5001(f)(3), when 5 read together with § 5000(a), establishes that defendants have a mandatory ministerial 6 duty not to accept enhanced FMAP funds with one hand, and cut services with the other 7 while contributing funds to a reserve or rainy-day fund. They claim that because the State 8 of California is accepting the FMAP enhancements, which will save the State approximately 9 $3 billion, it cannot then turn around and cancel services worth only $129 million a year on 10 the ground that it can not afford them.

11 Second, with regard to irreparable injury, plaintiffs cite to declarations detailing the 12 ways in which the elimination of the nine Medicaid services will affect Medicaid 13 beneficiaries, and will lead to increased pain and suffering, as well as the possibility of 14 developing other medical conditions. Plaintiffs also contend that the organizational plaintiffs 15 will suffer irreparable injury on their own account, as they will be impeded in their ability to 16 carry out functions for which they are organized to provide – to enable the blind, elderly, 17 and disabled of our population to obtain adequate medical care and to achieve and 18 continue independence.

19 Third, plaintiffs argue that the balance of hardships tips strongly in their favor. They 20 argue that the State will suffer no financial loss because it is receiving $3.76 billion extra 21 funds from the enhanced FMAP payments, out of which to pay the relatively small amount 22 of $129.4 million that will be cut as a result of eliminating the nine Medicaid services.

23 Finally, plaintiffs assert that the public interest strongly favors granting relief, as the 24 requested injunctive relief carries out Congress’ express purpose to protect and maintain 25 and not cut Medicaid services, and because our society as a whole suffers when we 26 neglect the poor, the hungry, and the disabled.

27 In opposition, defendants argue that the motion must be denied because plaintiffs 28 cannot establish the elements necessary for preliminary injunctive relief. Defendants focus

1 primarily on the question whether plaintiffs have demonstrated a likelihood of success on 2 the merits. Defendants contend that plaintiffs cannot show a likelihood of success on the 3 merits because § 14131.10(b)(1) does not conflict with § 5000(a) or with § 5001(f)(3). In 4 addition, defendants assert, plaintiffs' claims fail as a matter of law because the ARRA 5 provisions at issue are not privately enforceable.

6 Defendants assert that § 14131.10(b)(1) does not conflict with § 5000(a) because 7 the "purpose clause" is advisory or hortatory, not mandatory, and therefore cannot support 8 a cause of action. In addition, they note that the stated purpose of ARRA Title V is to "help 9] to avert cuts to provider payment rates and benefits or services," § 5000(a)(2) (emphasis 10 added), and contend that nothing in ARRA precludes the states from cutting benefits or 11 services, which is what the State of California has done here, as distinct from tightening 12 eligibility requirements, which it has not.

13 Defendants point to comments by Senator Chuck Grassley, who spoke out against 14 H.R. 1 when it was being debated in the Senate. Senator Grassley opposed the bill 15 because while it told states not to restrict Medicaid eligibility, it did not tell them that they 16 could not cut payments and services. See 155 Cong. Rec. S1474, S1513 (Feb. 4, 2009)
17 (statement of Sen. Grassley). Defendants also point to statements by Senator Grassley 18 regarding a proposed amendment that would have prevented states from cutting benefits 19 and provider payment rates as a condition of receiving enhanced FMAP payments, see 155 20 Cong. Rec. S2009-2010, 2013-2014 (Feb. 9, 2009) (statements of Sen. Grassley), and 21 note that the amendment was not passed by the Senate.

22 Defendants contend that § 14131.10(b)(1) also does not conflict with § 5000(f)(3), as 23 nothing in the State statute requires or authorizes the deposit of enhanced FMAP into a 24 rainy-day fund, or even mentions the disposition of the enhanced FMAP funds. In addition, 25 defendants argue that the allegations that defendants have "allowed savings resulting to 26 the State from enhanced FMAP . . . to sink into the fungible funds of the State of California" 27 rather than to be used directly for Medicaid, and that they have "s[u]nk" the enhanced 28 FMAP "to be reserved, used as a rainy day fund," FAC ¶ 41, are entirely conclusory and

1 therefore insufficient to state a claim under the standard recently articulated by the U.S.
2 Supreme Court in Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 129 S.Ct. 1937, 1950 (2009).

3 Defendants submit that even were these allegations adequately pled, the claim 4 would fail as a matter of law because nothing in the test of § 5001(f)(3) prohibits the State 5 from applying savings resulting from enhanced FMAP to offset non-Medicaid expenditures.
6 Defendants contend that CMS confirmed as much in its guidance to the States, when it 7 said that States “may use this freed up State money to fund other programs within the 8 State, such as education, or to maintain some aspects of their Medicaid programs that may 9 have been previously cut due to budgetary constraints.” Defendants argue that the federal 10 agency’s interpretation, which is consistent with the language of ARRA, is entitled to 11 substantial deference.

12 Defendants make two additional arguments in support of their assertion that plaintiffs 13 cannot show a likelihood of success. First, to the extent that plaintiffs allege that 14 implementation of § 14131.10(b)(1) will violate ARRA – as opposed to asserting that 15 § 14131.10(b)(1) is preempted by ARRA – defendants argue that plaintiffs’ claims fail as a 16 matter of law because the ARRA provisions at issue are not privately enforceable, as they 17 do not evince any Congressional intent to create either private enforceable rights or a 18 private remedy. Rather, defendants assert, it appears that Congress intended that the 19 obligation to enforce ARRA, and to impose remedies for noncompliance would lie with 20 CMS, as § 5001(g) provides for reporting by the states to CMS.

21 Second, defendants argue that the relief sought violates separation of powers. They 22 contend that the request that the court order the State to “cancel and withdraw all requests” 23 to amend the State plan to implement § 14131.10(b)(1), or the alternate request that if HHS 24 approves the proposed amendment, the State be ordered to re-amend its Medicaid plan to 25 restore the services, constitutes an effort by plaintiffs to disrupt and preempt the precise 26 means adopted by Congress for review of the State’s compliance with the Medicaid Act.

27 With regard to the remaining factors in the injunctive relief analysis, defendants 28 argue that plaintiffs have not met their burden of demonstrating irreparable injury, as the

1 individual declarants offer no competent evidence with regard to acupuncture, audiology, 2 speech therapy, chiropractic, and psychological services, and the organizational declarants 3 simply offer speculation unsupported by facts. Defendants also assert that plaintiffs have 4 not carried their burden with regard to adult dental services, optometric and optician 5 services, and incontinence creams and washes, as the evidence provided is speculative 6 and anecdotal.

7 Defendants contend that the factors of balance of hardships and the public interest 8 favor defendants, noting that the State of California is facing an unprecedented budget 9 crisis, and asserting that the State reduced Medicaid coverage of certain optional services 10 as a last resort (while retaining many optional coverages including coverage of prescription 11 drugs).

12 The court finds that the motion must be DENIED, as plaintiffs have not met their 13 burden of showing a likelihood of success on the merits. Specifically, they have not 14 established that § 14131.10(b)(1) is preempted by either § 5000(a) or § 5001(f)(3).

15 Federal preemption is premised upon the Supremacy Clause of the United States 16 Constitution. The Supremacy Clause invalidates all state laws that “interfere with, or are 17 contrary to,” federal law. Hillsborough County v. Automated Med. Labs., 471 U.S. 707, 712 18 (1985) (quoting Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 22 U.S. 1, 82 (1824)). A plaintiff may bring 19 suit under the Supremacy Clause to enjoin implementation of a state law allegedly 20 preempted by federal statute, regardless of whether the federal statute at issue confers an 21 express “right” or cause of action on the plaintiff. Independent Living Ctr. of So. Calif. v.
22 Shewry, 543 F.3d 1047, 1048-49 (9th Cir. 2009).

23 Federal preemption analysis always starts with a question of congressional intent, 24 and then proceeds to a discussion of the state law's interaction with the federal law or 25 regulation. See Wyeth v. Levine, 129 S.Ct. 1187, 1195 (2009); English v. General Elec.
26 Co., 496 U.S. 72, 78-79 (1990); see also Medtronic, Inc. v. Lohr, 518 U.S. 470, 485 (1996)
27 (“[t]he purpose of Congress is the ultimate touchstone’ in every preemption case”) 28 (quotation and citation omitted).

1 State action may be preempted by federal law in three ways – where Congress
2 expressly preempts state law; where Congress indicates by implication that federal law 3 shall exclusively occupy a field of regulation; and where state law conflicts with federal law.
4 Lorillard Tobacco Co. v. Reilly, 533 U.S. 525, 541 (2001).

5 Here, ARRA Title V contains no express statement of intent to preempt state law. In 6 addition, the court is unaware of any federal regulations that contain any such statement of 7 express preemption. Nor has Congress indicated by implication that federal law shall 8 exclusively occupy the field of regulation, as Medicaid is a cooperative federal-state 9 program, in which federal law imposes certain requirements, but in which the states also 10 play a role in deciding how the program will operate.

11 A conflict between state and federal law “arises when compliance with both federal 12 and state regulations is a physical impossibility or when state law stands as an obstacle to 13 the accomplishment and execution of the full purposes and objectives of Congress.”
14 Hillsborough, 471 U.S. at 713; see also Independent Living Ctr of So. Calif. v. Maxwell-15 Jolly, 572 F.3d 644, 653 (9th Cir. 2009).

16 Plaintiffs allege in the FAC that the acceptance by the State of California of 17 enhanced FMAP funds (under ARRA)

18 was and is and subject to an express and implied requirement imposed by 19 Congress, in the purposes clause of § 5000 of the Enhanced FMAP Measure:
20 namely, that the State shall protect and maintain the State's Medicaid 21 program including averting cutting any services, (at least, so long as the State enjoys savings from receipt of the enhanced FMAP funds which exceed the cost of the Medicaid services it proposes to cut).

22 FAC ¶ 30. Although it is not entirely clear from the papers, plaintiffs' position, based on 23 statements of counsel at the hearing, appears to be that § 14131.10(b)(1) conflicts with 24 ARRA because compliance with both federal and state law is impossible, and because 25 state law prevents the full accomplishment of Congressional purposes.

26 The U.S. Supreme Court recently commented that “physical impossibility” may not 27 be the most appropriate standard for determining whether the text of state and federal laws 28 directly conflict. See Wyeth, 129 S.Ct. at 1208-09. In any event, the court finds nothing in

1 the text of the laws at issue here that suggests that it is impossible to comply with both 2 state and federal law, as § 14131.10 does not mention the use of the enhanced FMAP 3 funds, and nothing in Title V prohibits states receiving the enhanced FMAP funds from 4 cutting optional Medicaid services.

5 Thus, the court must consider whether state law stands as an obstacle to the full 6 purpose and objectives of Congress. With regard to § 5000(a), plaintiffs contend that 7 Congress provided the enhanced FMAP to the states so that they would not cut Medicaid 8 services, and that California's enactment of a law requiring the elimination of certain 9 "optional" Medicaid services stands as an obstacle to the accomplishment and execution of 10 that Congressional purpose.

11 With regard to § 5001(f)(3), plaintiffs appear to be arguing that because the cost of 12 the eliminated optional Medicaid services is less than the total amount the State of 13 California is to receive under the enhanced FMAP, the fact that the State is not using the 14 enhanced FMAP funds to pay for the optional services means that it is "indirectly" 15 depositing some of the FMAP funds into a reserve fund – which also stands as an obstacle 16 to the accomplishment and execution of Congressional purpose.

17 ARRA Title V is entitled "State Fiscal Relief," and, as described above, has a two-18 fold purpose. Section 5000(a), subpart (2), is the clause at issue here. It sets forth a 19 general purpose, which is "to protect and maintain" state Medicaid programs during a 20 period of economic downturn. It then provides two ways in Title V is intended to protect 21 and maintain those Medicaid programs. The first way is "by helping to avert cuts to 22 provider payment rates and benefits or services." The second way is "by helping . . . to 23 prevent constrictions of income eligibility requirements for such programs, but not to 24 promote increases in such requirements."

25 The court agrees with defendants that subpart (2) is advisory or precatory, not 26 mandatory. See Pennhurst State Sch. & Hosp. v. Halderman, 451 U.S. 1, 24 (1981) (no 27 private cause of action because statute spoke in terms intended to be hortatory not 28 mandatory); Orkin v. Taylor, 487 F.3d 734, 739 (9th Cir. 2007) (under Cort v. Ash analysis,

1 reference to “the sense of Congress” was merely a precatory provision, not amounting to 2 positive, enforceable law); see also Wilder v. Virginia Hosp. Ass'n, 496 U.S. 498, 511 3 (1990) (elaborating on Pennhurst).

4 Plaintiffs contend that the first example – “by helping to avert cuts to . . . benefits or 5 services” – should be read as a statement of intent that states receiving the enhanced 6 FMAP payments are not permitted to cut any benefits or services that their Medicaid 7 beneficiaries had previously been receiving, even if those benefits or services are optional 8 under the Medicaid Act.

9 However, § 5000(a) it does not impose any “obligation” on the states, and also does 10 not mandate that the states categorically “avert cuts” to Medicaid programs. Section 11 5000(a) states that the enhanced FMAP payments are intended to “help avert” cuts to 12 benefits or services, not that the enhanced payments are meant to “prevent” such cuts. If 13 Congress had wanted to say that states receiving the enhanced FMAP payments were 14 required not to cut any benefits or services – in other words, that any state that cut benefits 15 or services would be ineligible for the enhanced FMAP payments – it could easily have 16 done so.

17 The second way in which the enhanced FMAP payments are intended to “protect 18 and maintain” Medicaid programs is by “helping . . . to prevent constrictions of income 19 eligibility requirements” for Medicaid. In § 5001(f)(1), Congress specifically provided that a 20 state would not be eligible for the enhanced FMAP payments “if eligibility standards, 21 methodologies, or procedures under its State plan . . . are more restrictive” than under the 22 plan that was in effect on July 1, 2008.

23 That is, under § 5001(f)(1), if a state makes it more difficult to qualify to be a 24 Medicaid beneficiary than it was as of July 1, 2008, that state will not be eligible for the 25 enhanced FMAP payments. However, there is no corresponding provision in § 5001 that 26 applies to the cutting of benefits or services. The fact that Congress did include the 27 limitation in § 5001(f)(1) indicates that it could also easily have included a prohibition 28 against cutting benefits or services if it wanted to, but chose not to.

1 In sum, the court finds that cuts in optional services mandated by Welfare and 2 Institutions Code § 14131.10(b)(1) do not stand as an obstacle to the accomplishment and 3 execution of the congressional purpose stated in ARRA § 5000(a) subpart (2). Accordingly, 4 plaintiffs have not established a likelihood of success as to the first cause of action.

5 Similarly, with regard to the second cause of action, the court finds that 6 § 14131.10(b)(1) does not stand as an obstacle to the accomplishment and execution of 7 Congressional purpose. As discussed above, nothing in § 14131.10(b)(1) requires or 8 authorizes the deposit of enhanced FMAP funds into a reserve or rainy day fund, or in any 9 way addresses the disposition of the funds. Accordingly, plaintiffs have not established a 10 likelihood of success as to the second cause of action.

11 Finally, plaintiffs cannot establish a likelihood of success on the fourth cause of 12 action if they do so as to the first and second causes of action, as the fourth cause of action 13 is entirely derivative of the first two causes of action.

14 Because the court finds that plaintiffs have not established a likelihood of success on 15 the merits, the court finds it unnecessary to address the remaining factors governing 16 motions for preliminary injunction.

17 B. Motion to Dismiss

18 Maxwell-Jolly and Schwarzenegger seek an order dismissing the complaint for 19 failure to state a claim and for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, arguing that § 14131.10 20 does not conflict with ARRA, and also asserting that there is no private right of action to 21 enforce §§ 5000 and 5001 of ARRA.

22 1. Legal Standards

23 a. Motions to Dismiss for Failure to State a Claim

24 A motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) tests for the legal sufficiency of the claims 25 alleged in the complaint. Ileto v. Glock, Inc., 349 F.3d 1191, 1199-1200 (9th Cir. 2003).
26 Review is limited to the contents of the complaint. Allarcom Pay Television, Ltd. v. Gen.
27 Instrument Corp., 69 F.3d 381, 385 (9th Cir. 1995). To survive a motion to dismiss for 28 failure to state a claim, a complaint generally must satisfy only the minimal notice pleading

1 requirements of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 8. Rule 8(a)(2) requires only that the 2 complaint include a “short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is 3 entitled to relief.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(2).

4 A motion to dismiss should be granted if the complaint does not proffer enough facts 5 to state a claim for relief that is plausible on its face. See id. at 558-59. “[W]here the well-6 pleaded facts do not permit the court to infer more than the mere possibility of misconduct, 7 the complaint has alleged – but it has not ‘show[n]’ – ‘that the pleader is entitled to relief.’” 8 Iqbal, 129 S.Ct. at 1950.

9 b. Motions to Dismiss for Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction

10 Federal courts are courts of limited jurisdiction, possessing only that power 11 authorized by Article III of the United States Constitution and statutes enacted by Congress 12 pursuant thereto. See Kokkonen v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of America, 511 U.S. 375, 377
13 (1994). Thus, federal courts have no power to consider claims for which they lack subject-14 matter jurisdiction. See Chen-Cheng Wang ex rel. United States v. FMC Corp., 975 F.2d 15 1412, 1415 (9th Cir. 1992).

16 The court is under a continuing duty to dismiss an action whenever it appears that 17 the court lacks jurisdiction. Billingsly v. C.I.R., 868 F.2d 1081, 1085 (9th Cir. 1989). The 18 burden of establishing that a cause lies within this limited jurisdiction rests upon the party 19 asserting jurisdiction. Kokkonen, 511 U.S. at 377; Tosco Corp. v. Communities for a Better 20 Env't, 236 F.3d 495, 499 (9th Cir. 2001).

21 2. Defendants' Motion

22 Defendants argue that the first two causes of action fail as a matter of law, for the 23 reasons argued in opposition to plaintiffs' motion for preliminary injunction, and assert that 24 the fourth cause of action fails because it is derivative of the first two causes of action.

25 With regard to the first cause of action, defendants assert that § 14131.10 does not 26 conflict with § 5000(a), because Title V's “purpose clause” is advisory or hortatory rather 27 than mandatory, and because nothing in ARRA precludes states from cutting “benefits or 28 services,” which is what the State of California has done here, as distinct from constricting

1 eligibility requirements, which it has not.

2 With regard to the second cause of action, defendants argue that § 14131.10 does 3 not conflict with § 5001(f)(3) because nothing in § 14131.10 requires or authorizes deposit 4 of enhanced FMAP into a rainy day fund, or addresses in any matter the disposition of the 5 funds.

6 Plaintiffs make the same arguments in opposition to the motion to dismiss as they 7 made in support of their motion for preliminary injunction. First, they contend that the 8 enhanced FMAP estimated to be received by the State will amount to approximately $3.76 9 billion per year – a sum that the State would otherwise have had to expend for services in 10 the Medi-Cal program in California – and that the amount the State will save by cutting the 11 nine optional Medicaid services will be approximately $129.4 million.

12 Plaintiffs argue that the refusal of the State to use any of the $3.76 billion it is saving 13 to cover the cost of the $129.4 million it is cutting violates the express “purpose clause” of 14 § 5000(a), which, plaintiffs assert, “expressly imposes upon the State and its officers the 15 obligation to protect and maintain the State’s Medicaid program by averting cuts to services 16 of the program;” and also violates the provision in § 5001(f)(3) that prohibits States from 17 directly or indirectly depositing the enhanced FMAP funds into a rainy-day fund. Plaintiffs 18 then argue that they are entitled to injunctive relief, for the same reasons as argued in their 19 motion for preliminary injunction.

20 The court finds that the motion must be GRANTED. To the extent that the FAC 21 alleges that § 14131.10(b)(1) is preempted by ARRA because it conflicts with federal law, 22 the motion to dismiss is granted without leave to amend. For the reasons stated above in 23 the discussion of plaintiffs’ motion for preliminary injunction, the court finds no express or 24 implied preemption, and no conflict between § 5000(a) and § 14131.10(b)(1), or between 25 § 5001(f)(1) and §14131.10(b)(1).

26 The basis of plaintiffs’ suit is not entirely clear, however. While they allege in the 27 FAC that this is a case brought under the Supremacy Clause – that is, that both the first 28 and second causes of action are claims “[f]or injunction against each defendant, to enjoin

1 State action preempted under the Supremacy Clause” – they also allege, for example, that 2 § 14131.10 and “the policies and actions” of the defendants

3 constitute State action which is in violation of, hence preempted, under the 4 Supremacy Clause, by subd. (f)(3) of § 5001 and the purposes for which the 5 aforesaid subd. (f)(3) of § 5001 was enacted to accomplish, (namely to protect and maintain the State's Medicaid program by averting cuts to Medicaid services, as specified by § 5000(a).

6 FAC ¶ 40.

7 In other words, they appear to be alleging both that § 14131.10.(b)(1) is preempted
8 by ARRA, and that in implementing the cuts mandated by § 14131.10(b)(1), defendants 9 have violated, or will violate, ARRA. In addition, plaintiffs argue in their opposition to the 10 motion to dismiss (as in their motion for preliminary injunction) that the cutting of the nine 11 Medicaid services “violates” ARRA – not just that § 14131.10(b)(1) is preempted by ARRA.

12 Accordingly, to the extent that plaintiffs intend to allege that in implementing 13 § 14131.10, defendants have violated (or will violate) ARRA, the court also finds that the 14 motion should be granted, without leave to amend as to the first cause of action, but with 15 leave to amend as to the second cause of action.

16 As to the first cause of action, amendment would be futile, because § 5000(a) is 17 advisory or hortatory rather than mandatory, and therefore cannot support a cause of 18 action. See Pennhurst, 451 U.S. at 24. It is true, as plaintiffs assert, that under Shewry, a 19 private party may seek declaratory and injunctive relief against the enforcement of a state 20 statutory scheme on the ground of federal preemption, even in the absence of an explicit 21 statutory provision establishing a cause of action, and regardless of whether the federal 22 statute at issue confers a “federal right” on the plaintiff. Id., 543 F.3d at 1058. Here, 23 however, plaintiffs have conflated the right to seek injunctive relief against the enforcement 24 of a state statute on the ground of federal preemption, with the right to bring a claim 25 alleging violation of a federal statute by state officials.

26 That is, while plaintiffs are permitted, under the rule stated in Shewry, to seek an 27 order enjoining the implementation of a state statute on the grounds that it is preempted by 28 federal law, the same analysis does not apply to a claim that a state official has violated

1 federal law by implementing the provisions of a state statute.

2 Under that second option, the issue is whether Congress intended that there be a 3 private right of action under the particular federal law at issue. Thus, the court must 4 determine whether Congress intended to create a federal right with its enactment. See 5 Gonzaga Univ. v. Doe, 536 U.S. 273, 283 (2002). This is because, like substantive federal 6 law itself, private rights of action to enforce federal law must be created by Congress. See 7 Alexander v. Sandoval, 532 U.S. 275, 286 (2001).

8 Here, because plaintiffs have confused the two issues (claim of federal preemption 9 vs. claim of violation of federal law), and the question is not adequately briefed, and the 10 court therefore does not decide whether or not Congress intended a private right of action, 11 but assumes – for purposes of this motion only – that it did so. In such a case, the ultimate 12 question with regard to the second cause of action – the claim that § 14131.10 violates the 13 provision in § 5001(f)(3) that the State is not eligible for enhanced FMAP payments if any 14 amounts attributable to increased FMAP are deposited into a rainy-day fund – is whether 15 the State is actually depositing any of the funds received under the FMAP enhancement 16 provision into a reserve or rainy-day fund.

17 Plaintiffs do not allege in the FAC any facts showing that such a fund exists or that 18 the State is depositing some of the money it is receiving under the FMAP enhancement 19 provision into said rainy-day fund. What plaintiffs do allege is that defendants “have 20 allowed savings resulting to the State from use of enhanced FMAP funds in the Medicaid 21 program[] to sink into the fungible funds of the State of California, to be reserved, used as 22 a rainy day fund, and spent for other purposes; – without using these savings to protect and 23 maintain the State’s Medicaid program including averting cuts in Medicaid services.” FAC 24 ¶ 41.

25 Defendants claim that there is no rainy-day fund. They submit a declaration by 26 Michael Genest (the Finance Director), stating that the State of California does not currently 27 have a reserve or rainy-day fund with money in it; and also stating that the funds being 28 provided under ARRA are being used for Medicaid purposes. For their part, plaintiffs do

1 not provide any evidence that the State is in fact depositing the funds into a rainy-day fund.
2 Nevertheless, in a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, defendants' evidence may not be considered by 3 the court.

4 The court agrees with defendants that under lqbal, the second cause of action does 5 not allege sufficient facts to state a claim. Accordingly, the motion is granted with leave to 6 amend the second cause of action, to allege facts showing that the State has in fact 7 violated ARRA by depositing the enhanced FMAP funds into a rainy-day fund. Any 8 amended complaint must be filed no later than October 1, 2009.

9 Should plaintiffs choose to file an amended complaint, defendants may file a motion 10 to dismiss for failure to state a claim, and may also file a motion to dismiss on the ground 11 that there is no private right of action to assert a claim under ARRA.

12 CONCLUSION

13 In accordance with the foregoing, the court DENIES the motion for preliminary 14 injunction, and GRANTS the motion to dismiss, with leave to amend the second cause of 15 action only.
