

In EEOC v. Keane, Inc., the Commission alleged that the company, a national information technology firm, treated black employees unequally in bonuses, project assignments and client development, and subjected them to a racially hostile environment. Seven African American current and former employees received $350,000 in monetary relief.