

1 motion for preliminary injunction to “prevent further violations of Plaintiffs’ First 2 Amendment right to photograph matters exposed to public view, including the conduct 3 of law enforcement officers in the course of their duties.” (Pls.’ Mot. Prelim. Inj. [Doc

6 A. Incident Involving Mr. Ramirez

7 Mr. Ramirez is a U.S. citizen living in San Diego, California who crosses the 8 border three or four times a month, often to visit his family in Mexico. (Declaration of 9 Christian Ramirez [Doc. 19-3], ¶¶ 2, 3.) He works as the Human Rights Director for 10 Alliance San Diego, a nonprofit organization dedicated to a number of causes, including 11 issues related to immigrant rights at the U.S.-Mexico Border. (Id., ¶ 4.) As part of his 12 job, and as a concerned member of the “border community,” Ramirez often visits the 13 U.S.-Mexico border “to observe law enforcement activity and monitor human rights 14 issues.” (Id., ¶ 5.)

15 On or around June 20, 2010, Mr. Ramirez and his wife were returning to the 16 United States from visiting a family member in Mexico. (Id., ¶¶ 6-7.) After being 17 admitted into the United States, Mr. Ramirez and his wife crossed a pedestrian bridge 18 that passes over Interstate 5 on the U.S. side of the border. (Id., ¶ 7.) While crossing 19 the bridge, Mr. Ramirez noticed that male CBP officers were inspecting and patting 20 down female pedestrians at a southbound pedestrian checkpoint below the bridge. (Id., 21 ¶ 8.) Mr. Ramirez claims that his wife said that the officers were only inspecting female 22 pedestrians. (Id.) Mr. Ramirez stopped for more than ten minutes to observe the 23 checkpoint, taking several pictures with his cell phone camera “out of concern that the 24 officers were acting inappropriately.” (Opp’n, pp. 5–6 (citing Decl. Ramirez, ¶ 9).)
25 Defendants claim that Mr. Ramirez admits to having taken these photos while on CBP 26 port of entry property. (Opp’n, pp. 9-10.) Mr. Ramirez denies this claim. (Reply [Doc.
27 30] 5.) It is undisputed that Mr. Ramirez did not attempt to obtain permission from 28

1 CBP prior to photographing the port of entry. (See Declaration of Billy Whitford [Doc 27-2 1], ¶¶ 38-42; See generally Pls.’ Mot. Prelim. Inj.; See generally Reply.)

3 While Mr. Ramirez was observing and photographing the checkpoint, a 4 uniformed officer asked him to present his personal identification documents and to 5 stop taking pictures. (Decl. Ramirez, ¶¶ 11, 12.) After explaining that he had already 6 passed through inspection, refusing to hand over his documents, and taking another 7 picture of the officer, Mr. Ramirez and his wife began to descend the pedestrian bridge.
8 (Id., ¶¶ 12, 13.) Mr. Ramirez alleges that he was subsequently detained, questioned, 9 and searched. (Id., ¶¶ 14-21.) Mr. Ramirez claims that a CBP officer took his phone 10 and deleted all of his photos of the checkpoint. (Id. ¶ 22.) CBP has not located records 11 of any incident involving Mr. Ramirez on or around June 20, 2010. (Opp’n. 11.) 12

13 B. Incident Involving Mr. Askins

14 Mr. Askins is a U.S. citizen living primarily in Mexicali, Mexico who frequently 15 crosses the border into the United States. (Declaration of Ray Askins [Doc. 19-2], ¶¶ 16 2, 3.) He maintains and contributes to a blog that addresses environmental issues and 17 human rights abuses in the U.S.-Mexico border region. (Id., ¶ 3.) Mr. Askins’ work 18 “involves extensive research, investigation, and analysis of CBP activities.” (Id., ¶4.)
19 On April 18, 2012, Plaintiff Ray Askins emailed Calexico Port Director Billy Whitford 20 and Calexico Public Affairs and Supervisory CBP Officer John Campos, requesting 21 permission to photograph the interior of the vehicle secondary inspection area of the 22 Calexico Port of Entry. (Decl. Whitford, ¶ 12; Decl. Whitford, Ex. C.) His email, sent 23 at approximately 4:30 p.m., indicated he would be passing through the Calexico port 24 around noon on April 19, 2013. (Decl. Whitford, Ex. C.) Mr. Askins alleges that he 25 also called Officer Campos on April 18, 2012 with the same request. (Decl. Whitford, ¶ 26 8.) According to Mr. Askins, Officer Campos said that it would be inconvenient for 27 him to take the requested photos, but he did not explicitly object to the request. (Decl.
28 Whitford, ¶ 8.)

1 The next morning, on April 19, 2013, having received no response from Mr.
2 Whitford, Mr. Askins called Officer Campos to follow up on his request. (Decl.
3 Whitford, ¶ 13.) Defendants contend that Officer Campos explained to Mr. Askins that 4 he did not have permission to photograph the secondary vehicle inspection area at that 5 time, but was free to photograph the port of entry when not on port of entry property.
6 (Id.) Mr. Askins claims that his call was not answered, and he left a voicemail 7 indicating that instead of taking photographs inside the secondary inspection area, he 8 would stand on the street in Calexico and photograph the secondary inspection from 9 there. (Decl. Askins, ¶ 10.)

10 Later that day, Mr. Askins drove to Calexico and photographed the exit of 11 secondary inspection area. (Decl. Askins, ¶ 10.) Mr. Askins contends that he took the 12 photos from a public street outside the port of entry. (Id. ¶ 11.) Defendants contend 13 that the location where Mr. Askins took the photos was on port of entry property.
14 (Decl. Whitford, ¶ 14.) Shortly thereafter, Mr. Askins was detained and searched by 15 CBP officers who had observed him taking photographs. (Decl. Whitford [Doc. 27-1] 16 ¶¶ 14, 16, 17, 18.) Mr. Askins alleges that the CBP officers deleted the photos he had 17 taken after Mr. Askins refused the CBP officers' request to delete the photos. (Decl.
18 Askins, ¶¶ 12-13, 20.) CBP denies deleting Askins's photographs. (Opp'n., p. 10; 19 Whitford Decl., ¶¶ 19, 21.)

20 On October 24, 2012, Plaintiffs filed their complaint against Defendant, claiming 21 violations of the First and Fourth Amendments. (Compl. [Doc. 1].) On January 29, 22 2013, Plaintiffs filed a motion for preliminary injunction based on Defendants' alleged 23 violations of the First Amendment. (Pls.' Mot. Prelim. Inj. [Doc. 19]; see also Reply 24 [Doc. 30].) Defendants oppose. (Opp'n [Doc. 27].)

25 26 II. LEGAL STANDARD

27 Under Rule 65 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, a district court has the 28 authority to issue a preliminary injunction in the exercise of its equitable powers. Fed.

1 R. Civ. P. 65. “The standard for granting a preliminary injunction balances the 2 plaintiff’s likelihood of success against the relative hardship to the parties.” Clear 3 Channel Outdoor, Inc. v. City of L.A., 340 F.3d 810, 813 (9th Cir. 2003); Stormans, 4 Inc. v. Selecky, 586 F.3d 1109, 1139 (9th Cir. 2008). A preliminary injunction is an 5 extraordinary and drastic remedy, one that should not be granted unless the movant, 6 by a clear showing, carries the burden of persuasion. Mazurek v. Armstrong, 520 U.S.
7 968, 972 (1997). The Ninth Circuit recognizes two tests for granting preliminary 8 injunctive relief. Save Our Sonoran, Inc. v. Flowers, 408 F.3d 1113, 1120 (9th Cir.
9 2005).

10 To obtain a preliminary injunction under the first, “traditional,” test, a plaintiff 11 must show “(1) a strong likelihood of success on the merits, (2) the possibility of 12 irreparable injury to plaintiff if preliminary relief is not granted, (3) a balance of 13 hardships favoring the plaintiff, and (4) advancement of the public interest (in certain 14 cases).” Save Our Sonoran, 408 F.3d at 1120 (quoting Johnson v. Cal. State Bd. of 15 Accountancy, 72 F.3d 1427, 1430 (9th Cir. 1995)).

16 To obtain a preliminary injunction under the second, “alternative,” test, a 17 plaintiff must demonstrate either (1) a combination of probable success on the merits 18 and the possibility of irreparable injury or (2) that serious questions are raised and the 19 balance of hardships tips sharply in his favor. Save Our Sonoran, 408 F.3d at 1120
20 (citing Johnson, 72 F.3d 1430); Immigrant Assistance Project of the L.A. Cnty. of Fed’n 21 of Labor v. INS, 306 F.3d 842, 873 (9th Cir. 2002). “These two formulations represent 22 two points on a sliding scale in which the required degree of irreparable harm increases 23 as the probability of success decreases. They are not separate tests but rather outer 24 reaches of a single continuum.” Baby Tam & Co. v. City of Las Vegas, 154 F.3d 1097, 25 1100 (9th Cir. 1998). Thus, “the greater the relative hardship to the moving party, the 26 less probability of success must be shown.” Immigrant Assistance Project, 306 F.3d at 27 873 (citations). “Conversely, it has been held that a preliminary injunction may be 28

1 granted even though the harm factor favors defendant if plaintiff demonstrates a 2 substantial likelihood that he will ultimately prevail.” Id. (citations).

3 “In cases where the public interest is involved, the district court must also 4 examine whether the public interest favors the plaintiff.” Fund for Animals, Inc. v.
5 Lujan, 962 F.2d 1391, 1400 (9th Cir. 1992); see also Caribbean Marine Servs. Co., Inc.
6 v. Baldrige, 844 F.2d 668, 674 (9th Cir. 1988) (“Under either test, however, the district 7 court must consider the public interest as a factor in balancing the hardships when the 8 public interest may be affected.”).

10 III. DISCUSSION

11 As an initial matter, there is some dispute as to the scope of Plaintiffs’ requested 12 preliminary injunction. Plaintiffs claim that “[c]ontrary to Defendants’ assertion, 13 Plaintiffs do not seek an injunction preventing Defendants from regulating photography 14 anywhere ‘on land ports of entry.’” (Reply, p. 1 (citing Opp’n., p. 1)). “Instead, Plaintiffs 15 seek only to protect their own well-established ‘First Amendment right to photograph 16 matters exposed to public view’—including the exterior of CBP buildings and officers 17 carrying out their duties in public.” (Reply, p. 1 (citing Pls.’ Mot. Prelim Inj.) The Court 18 agrees.

19 Defendants argue that the Plaintiffs were in a nonpublic forum when they took 20 the pictures in question, and therefore, we subject to CBP’s reasonable and viewpoint 21 neutral restrictions of unauthorized photography. (Opp’n. 15.) Thus, Defendants 22 characterize this motion as one that turns completely on whether or not Plaintiffs were 23 photographing the border from a public or private forum. (Opp’n., pp. 14-18.) That is 24 not the case. Instead, resolution of this motion depends on whether Plaintiffs can carry 25 their burden of establishing that they are likely to show that the Defendants violated 26 their alleged well-established First Amendment right to photograph matters exposed 27 to public view.

28

1 As mentioned above, a preliminary injunction is an extraordinary and drastic 2 remedy, one that should not be granted unless the movant, by a clear showing, carries 3 the burden of persuasion. Mazurek, 520 U.S. at 972. For the following reasons, the 4 Court finds that Plaintiffs have not met their burden, and as such, they are not entitled 5 to a preliminary injunction.

7 A. Probability of Success

8 Plaintiffs claim that they are likely to show that Defendants have violated the 9 First Amendment in two ways. Specifically, Plaintiffs claim that Defendants violated 10 Plaintiffs' constitutional rights to (1) photograph CBP officers engaged in the discharge 11 of their duties and (2) photograph the exterior of federal buildings such as U.S. ports 12 of entry. (Pls.' Mot. Prelim. Inj., pp. 10-18.) For the following reasons, the Court finds 13 that Plaintiffs are unlikely to succeed on the merits of these claims.

14
15 1. Plaintiffs Fail to Establish a First Amendment Right to 16 Photograph CBP Officers Executing Their Duties at the 17 Border

18 There is no doubt that citizens enjoy a First Amendment right to photograph 19 police officers performing their responsibilities in public places, as evidenced by the 20 cases cited by Plaintiffs. Fordyce v. City of Seattle, 55 F.3d 436, 439 (9th Cir 1995); 21 Glik v. Cunniffe, 655 F.3d 78, 82 (1st Cir. 2011) (holding that there is a constitutionally 22 protected right to videotape police carrying out their duties in public); Smith v. City 23 of Cumming, 212 F.3d 1332, 1333 (11th Cir. 2000) ("The First Amendment protects the 24 right to gather information about what public officials do on public property," including 25 right "to photograph or videotape police conduct"); Robinson v. Fetterman, 378 26 F.Supp. 2d 534, 542 (E.D. Pa. 2005) (finding First Amendment right to videotape state 27 troopers on public highway performing truck inspections). The Department of Justice 28 letter that Plaintiffs cite is in accord with this line of cases, and is also limited to

1 situations where police officers are performing their duties in a public place. (See DOJ
2 Letter [Doc. 19-6] 1.)

3 Noticeably lacking from the Plaintiffs' motion, however, is any argument as to 4 why these cases apply to CBP officers executing their duties at U.S. ports of entry.
5 Plaintiffs have not cited, and the Court is not aware of, controlling authority suggesting 6 that Plaintiffs have a First Amendment right to photograph CBP officers as they 7 perform their operational duties at U.S. ports of entry. (See Mot. Prelim. Inj., pp. 11-14.) 8 Instead, Plaintiffs conclude that “[g]iven the government’s unequivocal statements in 9 Sharp . . . Defendants cannot deny that the First Amendment protects the right to 10 record CBP officers engaged in the discharge of their duties.” Thus, Plaintiffs assume 11 that CBP officers are legally equivalent to police officers and that their duties are legally 12 equivalent to those of police officers. Moreover, Plaintiffs assume that the public places 13 at issue in the cases cited above are legally equivalent to U.S. ports of entry. The Court 14 is unwilling to make such assumptions, especially in light of the sensitive nature of CBP 15 operations and its responsibility for national security and secure borders. (See Decl.
16 Whitford, ¶¶ 8, 9.)

17 In light of the forgoing, the Court finds that Plaintiffs have failed to show that 18 citizens have a First Amendment right to photograph CBP officers executing their 19 duties at U.S. ports of entry. Therefore, Defendants have not shown that they are likely 20 to succeed on the merits of this line of argument.

21
22 2. Plaintiffs Fail to Establish a First Amendment Right to 23 Photograph the Secondary Inspection Area at the Border

24 Plaintiffs next argue that “the right to photograph matters exposed to public view 25 includes the public’s right to photograph the exterior of federal buildings and facilities.”
26 (Mot. Prelim. Inj. 14.) Thus, Plaintiffs contend, Mr. Askins’ photos of the secondary 27 inspection area are protected under the right to photograph matters exposed to public 28 view. (Id.) This argument is unpersuasive because Mr. Askins was photographing the inside of the secondary inspection area.

1 When Mr. Askins was confronted, he was photographing the interior of the 2 secondary vehicle inspection area at the port of entry. (Compl., ¶ 22; Decl. Askins, ¶ 3 10.) The secondary vehicle inspection area is “among the most sensitive areas on a port 4 of entry.” (Decl. Whitford, ¶ 15.) In the secondary vehicle inspection area, “CBP 5 officers conduct border searches and assist with investigations of vehicles using sensitive 6 search techniques and technologies.” (Id.) “Visual documentation of these techniques 7 and technologies could assist drug traffickers and human smugglers in alluding 8 detection.” (Id.) Plaintiffs’ argument relies heavily on the presumption that Mr. Askins 9 was taking exterior photos. Indeed, Plaintiffs present no argument that a First 10 Amendment right to photograph the interior of federally owned facilities exists. Even 11 the FPS bulletin that Plaintiffs’ rely upon in their brief explicitly states that it does not 12 apply to photography of the interior of federal buildings. (FPS Info. Bulletin [Doc. 19-7] 13 2(emphasis in original).)

14 Plaintiffs also attempt to establish a “right to photograph the exterior of federal 15 buildings” by suggesting that “architectural photography” has “inherent First 16 Amendment value.” (Mot. Prelim. Inj. 14.) Even if the Bery or Leicester cases establish 17 that the First Amendment protects “architectural photography,” such a rule is 18 unhelpful to Plaintiffs as they fail to argue how either case stands for the proposition 19 that Mr. Askins has a right to photograph the interior of the secondary vehicle 20 inspection area. See Bery v. City of New York, 97 F.3d 689 (2nd Cir. 1996); Leicester 21 v. Warner Bros., 232 F.3d 1212, 1217 (9th Cir. 2000).

22 Plaintiffs next argue that because these photos “served the purpose of discussing 23 and critiquing the environmental impact of exhaust emission from vehicles delayed at 24 the port of entry,” they are protected political speech under the First Amendment.
25 (Pls.’ Mot. Prelim. Inj., pp. 14-15.) However, none of the cases cited by Plaintiffs address 26 whether photographing the interior of sensitive government buildings is protected 27 political speech. Arizona Free Enterprise Club’s Freedom Club PAC v. Bennett, 131 28 S. Ct. 2806 (2011) (finding Arizona’s matching funds scheme substantially burdens political speech and is not sufficiently justified by a compelling interest to survive First

1 Amendment scrutiny); Butterworth v. Smith, 494 U.S. 624, 632 (1990) (finding Florida 2 statute prohibiting witness from ever disclosing testimony given before grand jury 3 violates First Amendment insofar as it prohibits witness from disclosing own testimony 4 after grand jury's term has ended); NAACP v. Clairborne Hardware Co., 458 U.S. 886, 5 913 (1982) (finding, inter alia, that a boycott which was not violent was constitutionally 6 protected).

7 Moreover, the Court is unimpressed by Plaintiffs' attempt to categorize Mr.
8 Askins' photographs as political speech. It is no secret that vehicles are delayed at land 9 ports of entry for hours at a time. Such delays may indeed negatively impact the 10 environment. However, Mr. Askins' photographs do not document vehicle delays but 11 instead amount to surveillance of CBP officers, techniques, and technologies. (Supra, 12 10.) Thus, Plaintiffs cannot show that photographing the operational activities of CBP 13 officers inside the secondary inspection area constitutes political speech.

14 In light of the forgoing, the Court finds that Plaintiffs have failed to show that 15 citizens have a First Amendment right to photograph the interior portion of the 16 secondary inspection area at U.S. ports of entry. Therefore, Defendants have not 17 shown that they are likely to succeed on the merits of this line of argument. Thus, the 18 likelihood of success factor weighs heavily against granting an injunction.

19 20 B. Irreparable Harm

21 The second factor the Court considers is irreparable harm. Plaintiffs argue that 22 because they "likely will prevail on the merits of their First Amendment claims" they 23 will necessarily suffer irreparable harm. (Pls.' Mot. Prelim. Inj., p. 21.)

24 "The loss of First Amendment freedoms, for even minimal periods of time, 25 unquestionably constitutes irreparable injury." Elrod v. Burns, 427 U.S. 347, 373 26 (1976). However, a plaintiff who is less likely to succeed must produce a greater 27 showing of irreparable harm. Preminger v. Principi, 422 F.3d 815, 826 (9th Cir. 2005).

28 As previously stated, Plaintiffs have not established a likelihood of success that CBP's photography rules violate their First Amendment rights. See Hale v. Dep't of 1 Energy, 806 F.2d 910, 918 (9th Cir. 1986) (holding “[a]bsent a First Amendment claim, 2 the appellants have failed to establish that irreparable harm will flow from a failure to 3 preliminarily enjoin defendants’ actions.”). Furthermore, Plaintiff Ramirez waited over 4 two years from the time of the alleged incident to file this lawsuit. (See Pls.’ Mot. Prelim.

5 Inj., p. 5.) Similarly, over six months passed between Askins’ incident and this lawsuit.
6 (See id., p. 2.) The passage of time implies a lack of necessity and weighs against 7 Plaintiff’s claim of irreparable harm. See Miller for & on Behalf of N.L.R.B. v.
8 California Pac. Med. Ctr., 991 F.2d 536, 544 (9th Cir. 1993) (“Plaintiff’s long delay 9 before seeking a preliminary injunction implies a lack of urgency and irreparable 10 harm.”).

11 For these reasons, the Court finds that Plaintiffs have not met their heightened 12 burden to show irreparable harm. See Preminger, 422 F.3d at 826. Thus, this factor 13 weighs heavily against granting an injunction.

14 15 C. Balance of Equities & Public Interest

16 The third and fourth factors the Court considers are the balance of the equities 17 and public interest. Plaintiffs argue that they meet both elements, noting that the 18 analysis of these two elements often merge when the government is the opposing party.
19 (Pls.’ Mot. Prelim. Inj., p. 21 (citing Nken v. Holder, 556 US 418, 435 (2009).)

20 When considering the necessity of a preliminary injunction, “the public interest 21 inquiry primarily addresses the impact on non-parties rather than parties.” Preminger, 22 422 F.3d at 826 (quoting Sammartano, 303 F.3d at 974 (9th Cir. 2002)). “Generally, 23 public interest concerns are implicated when a constitutional right has been violated, 24 because all citizens have a stake in upholding the Constitution.” Id. The Court will not 25 grant a preliminary injunction based on one set of public interests “unless those public 26 interests outweigh other public interests that cut in favor of not issuing the injunction.”
27 Alliance for the Wild Rockies v. Cottrell, 632 F.3d 1127, 1138 (9th Cir. 2011).

28 Plaintiffs first contend that the public interest favors an injunction because “it is always in the public interest to prevent the violation of a party’s constitutional

1 rights.” (Pls.’ Mot. Prelim. Inj., p. 21.) Further, Plaintiffs argue that “the public has a 2 specific interest in preserving the right to document CBP activities.” (Id.) However, 3 Plaintiffs have not shown that they are likely to establish a constitutional violation or 4 that citizens enjoy broad First Amendment protection to document all CBP “activities.”
5 (Id.)

6 In addition, Defendants persuasively argue that the rule restricting photography 7 serves important national and border security interests. (Opp’n, p. 30; Decl. Whitford, 8 ¶¶ 8-10.) Of particular import is the fact that granting an injunction would 9 compromise border security. (Decl. Whitford, ¶ 9.)

10 In light of the foregoing, Plaintiffs’ have not established that their First 11 Amendment concerns outweigh the public interests connected to border security.
12 Accordingly, this factor weighs against granting an injunction.

13
14 IV. CONCLUSION AND ORDER

15 For the reasons discussed above, the Court DENIES Plaintiffs’ motion for a 16 preliminary injunction [Doc. 19].

17
18 IT IS SO ORDERED.
