

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF PENNSYLVANIA

CONESTOGA WOOD SPECIALISTS CORP.,	:
et al.,	:
	:
Plaintiffs,	:	No. 5:12-cv-06744-MSG
	:
v.	:
	:
KATHLEEN SEBELIUS, et al.,	:	ELECTRONICALLY FILED
	:
Defendants.	:

AMICUS CURIAE* BRIEF OF THE AMERICAN CIVIL LIBERTIES UNION AND THE AMERICAN CIVIL LIBERTIES UNION OF PENNSYLVANIA IN OPPOSITION TO PLAINTIFFS' MOTION FOR PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION

TABLE OF CONTENTS

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES ii

INTRODUCTION 1

FACTUAL BACKGROUND.....2

ARGUMENT5

 I. The Contraception Rule Furthers The Compelling Government Interest In Eradicating Discrimination.....5

 II. The Contraception Rule Does Not Impose A Substantial Burden On The Plaintiffs’
 Religious Beliefs9

CONCLUSION.....11

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

Cases

Catholic Charities of Diocese of Albany v. Serio, 859 N.E.2d 459 (N.Y. 2006) 8

Catholic Charities of Sacramento, Inc. v. Superior Court, 85 P.3d 67 (Cal. 2004)..... 8

Dole v. Shenandoah Baptist Church, 899 F.2d 1389 (4th Cir. 1990)..... 5, 6, 9

EEOC v. Fremont Christian School, 781 F.2d 1362 (9th Cir. 1986) 9

EEOC v. Kamehameha Schools/Bishop Estate, 990 F.2d 458 (9th Cir. 1993)..... 5

Erzinger v. Regents of University of California, 137 Cal. App. 3d 389 (Cal. Ct. App. 1982) 11

Goehring v. Brophy, 94 F.3d 1294 (9th Cir. 1996), abrogated on other grounds by City of Boerne v. Flores, 521 U.S. 507 (1997) 10

Hobby Lobby Stores v. Sebelius, 870 F. Supp. 2d 1278 (W.D. Okla. 2012) 10

Korte v. Sebelius, No. 3:12-CV-1072, 2012 WL 6553996 (S.D. Ill. Dec. 14, 2012) 10

Newman v. Piggie Park Enter., Inc., 256 F. Supp. 941 (D.S.C. 1966), aff'd in relevant part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 377 F.2d 433 (4th Cir. 1967), aff'd and modified on other grounds, 390 U.S. 400 (1968) 6, 12

O'Brien v. U.S. Department of Health & Human Services, 2012 WL 4481208 (E.D. Mo. Sept. 28, 2012), stay granted, No. 12-CV-3357 (8th Cir. Nov. 28, 2012)..... 9-10

Planned Parenthood of Southeastern Pennsylvania v. Casey, 505 U.S. 833 (1992) 8

Tarsney v. O'Keefe, 225 F.3d 929 (8th Cir. 2000) 11

Zelman v. Simmons-Harris, 536 U.S. 639 (2002)..... 10

Federal Statutes

42 U.S.C. § 2000e 9

42 U.S.C. § 2000e-1 9

Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, Pub. L. No. 111-148, sec. 1001, § 2713(a), 124 Stat. 119, 131 (2010) (to be codified at 42 U.S.C. § 300gg-13(a)) 2

Regulations

45 C.F.R. § 147.130(a)(1)(iv) (2011) 3
 77 Fed. Reg. 16,501 (Mar. 21, 2012)..... 4
 77 Fed. Reg. 8725 (Feb. 15, 2012) 4, 8

Other Authorities

155 Cong. Rec. S11979 (daily ed. Nov. 30, 2009)..... 2, 3
 155 Cong. Rec. S12020 (daily ed. Dec. 1, 2009)..... 2, 3
 Cornelia T.L. Pillard, Our Other Reproductive Choices: Equality in Sex Education, Contraceptive Access, and Work-Family Policy, 56 Emory L.J. 941 (2007) 7
 Health Res. & Servs. Admin., U.S. Dep’t of Health & Human Servs., Women’s Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, <http://www.hrsa.gov/womensguidelines/> 3
 INSTITUTE OF MEDICINE, CLINICAL PREVENTIVE SERVICES FOR WOMEN: CLOSING THE GAPS (2011) 3, 4
 Su-Ying Liang et al., Women’s Out-of-Pocket Expenditures and Dispensing Patterns for Oral Contraceptive Pills Between 1996 and 2006, 83 Contraception 528 (2011) 4

INTRODUCTION

The American Civil Liberties Union and the American Civil Liberties Union of Pennsylvania (collectively “ACLU”) submit this amicus brief in opposition to Plaintiffs’ motion for a preliminary injunction, specifically on the issue of whether Plaintiffs are likely to succeed on the merits of their claims. The right to practice one’s religion, or no religion, is a core component of our civil liberties and is of vital importance to the ACLU. For this reason, amici routinely bring cases designed to protect the right to worship and express religious beliefs. The ACLU is also fiercely committed to fighting discrimination and inequality, including discrimination based on gender. Indeed, for more than four decades, the ACLU has worked to secure gender equality and ensure that women and girls are able to lead lives of dignity, free from violence and discrimination. An important component of gender equality is the ability of women to have full control of their reproductive lives and to be able to decide whether and when to have children.

Amici do not repeat the arguments presented by Defendants. Rather, amici submit this brief to provide historical context to support Defendants’ argument that Plaintiffs are unlikely to succeed on the merits of their claim that the federal contraception rule infringes on Plaintiffs’ religious liberty. The claims raised by Plaintiffs – that they have a right to discriminate against women and deny them benefits because of the company’s owners’ religious beliefs – are, unfortunately, not new. Regrettably, not so long ago, a secular school instituted a “Protestant-only” hiring policy based on the school’s founder’s religious preferences; employers claimed their right to religious freedom entitled them to pay men – who they considered to be the head of household based on their religious beliefs – more than women; businesses claimed that their right to religious liberty entitled them to discriminate against African-American customers in public accommodations; and universities claimed a religious liberty right to discriminate against African-American students. Fortunately, in each of these cases, courts squarely rejected the claims, recognizing that the right to religious liberty does not encompass the right to discriminate against others. This Court should come to the same conclusion here. Indeed, acceptance of Plaintiffs' claims would not only contravene this clear and consistent precedent, but would also open the door for arguments that countless anti-discrimination and other important laws should be unenforceable in the face of a claim that the discrimination is mandated by a religious belief.

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

The Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act ("ACA") provides that certain preventive services must be offered in health insurance plans without cost-sharing. Pub. L. No. 111-148, sec. 1001, § 2713(a), 124 Stat. 119, 131 (2010) (to be codified at 42 U.S.C. § 300gg-13(a)). In an effort to help eliminate some forms of gender inequality by equalizing men and women's health care coverage, Congress added the Women's Health Amendment ("WHA") to the ACA, which requires health insurance plans to cover additional preventive services for women. Id. sec. 1001, § 2713(a)(4), 124 Stat. at 131 (to be codified at 42 U.S.C. § 300gg-13(a)(4)).

The WHA was crucial to ensuring that women receive coverage for preventive services. Indeed, prior to its introduction, coverage for these services was absent from the ACA. See 155 Cong. Rec. S11987 (daily ed. Nov. 30, 2009) (statement of Sen. Mikulski) (noting that the ACA did not cover key preventive services for women). In passing the WHA, Senator Reid explained that the WHA was necessary for "millions of women who are being discriminated against" 155 Cong. Rec. at S12020 (daily ed. Dec. 1, 2009) (statement of Sen. Reid). As Senator Mikulski noted: "Often those things unique to women have not been included in health care reform. Today we guarantee it and we assure it and we make it affordable by dealing with copayments and deductibles” 155 Cong. Rec. at S11988 (daily ed. Nov. 30, 2009) (statement of Sen. Mikulski) (emphasis added). In particular, Congress intended to address gender disparities in out-of-pocket health care costs, much of which stem from reproductive health care:

Not only do [women] pay more for the coverage we seek for the same age and the same coverage as men do, but in general women of childbearing age spend 68 percent more in out-of-pocket health care costs than men. . . .

. . . .
This fundamental inequity in the current system is dangerous and discriminatory and we must act. The prevention section of the bill before us must be amended so coverage of preventive services takes into account the unique health care needs of women throughout their lifespan.

155 Cong. Rec. at S12027 (daily ed. Dec. 1, 2009) (statement of Sen. Gillibrand).

To implement the WHA, the Institute of Medicine (“IOM”), an independent, nonprofit organization that works outside of government to provide unbiased and authoritative advice to decision makers and the public, “review[ed] what preventive services are necessary for women’s health and well-being” and developed recommendations for comprehensive guidelines. INST. OF MEDICINE, CLINICAL PREVENTIVE SERVICES FOR WOMEN: CLOSING THE GAPS 2, 21 (2011) (“CLOSING THE GAPS”). Among other things, the report recommended that the preventive services include “the full range of Food and Drug Administration-approved contraceptive methods, sterilization procedures, and patient education and counseling for women with reproductive capacity.” Id. at 10, 165 tbl.7-1. On August 1, 2011, the Department of Health and Human Services (“HHS”) adopted these recommendations, including the recommendation on contraceptive services. See 45 C.F.R. § 147.130(a)(1)(iv) (2011); Health Res. & Servs. Admin., U.S. Dep’t of Health & Human Servs., Women’s Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, <http://www.hrsa.gov/womensguidelines/>.¹

¹ The contraception rule exempts houses of worship, 45 C.F.R. §§ 147.130(a)(1)(iv)(A)–(B), and the federal government is in process of modifying the rule as applied to religiously affiliated

In announcing the final rule, the government recognized that the ability to access contraception is essential to women's ability to participate fully in society. Indeed, as the government explained, the inability of women to access contraception places women in the workforce at a disadvantage compared to their male co-workers. Researchers have shown that access to contraception improves the social and economic status of women. Contraceptive coverage, by reducing the number of unintended and potentially unhealthy pregnancies, furthers the goal of eliminating this disparity by allowing women to achieve equal status as healthy and productive members of the job force. . . . The [federal government] aim[s] to reduce these disparities by providing women broad access to preventive services, including contraceptive services.

77 Fed. Reg. 8725, 8728 (Feb. 15, 2012) (footnote omitted).

In addition, the government recognized that cost is a real barrier to contraceptive access. The IOM found that “[d]espite increases in private health insurance coverage of contraception since the 1990s, many women do not have insurance coverage or are in health plans in which copayments for visits and for prescriptions have increased in recent years.” CLOSING THE GAPS at 109. Contraceptive copays can be so expensive that women can pay almost as much out-of-pocket as they would without coverage at all. Su-Ying Liang et al., Women's Out-of-Pocket Expenditures and Dispensing Patterns for Oral Contraceptive Pills Between 1996 and 2006, 83 Contraception 528, 531 (2011). Cost barriers are aggravated by the fact that women “typically earn less than men and . . . disproportionately have low incomes.” CLOSING THE GAPS at 19. Women who lack access to contraception face “barriers . . . that prevent women from achieving health and well-being for themselves and their families.” Id. at 20. The federal contraception rule, if undisturbed, will ensure that millions of women have access to contraception without cost barriers, thereby equalizing the health insurance costs between women and men and ensuring women's ability to equally participate in society.

non-profit employers. The modification will ensure employees will receive contraception coverage but that the employer will not bear the cost. 77 Fed. Reg. 16,501 (Mar. 21, 2012).

ARGUMENT

I. THE CONTRACEPTION RULE FURTHERS THE COMPELLING GOVERNMENT INTEREST IN ERADICATING DISCRIMINATION

One of the main questions in this case is whether secular, for-profit corporations can discriminate against their female employees by denying them the benefits the government has found to be a critical means of helping promote women's equality and eradicating discrimination. While today's controversy centers around health insurance benefits for contraception, the fundamental question – whether religious objections can trump neutral laws designed to eradicate discrimination – is not unique to this context. Indeed, it has arisen in numerous other contexts over the last five decades. For example:

- Almost twenty years ago, in 1993, a secular, private school maintained a “Protestant-only” hiring policy based on the school's founder's religious beliefs. Under this policy, the school refused to hire a substitute French language teacher because she was not Protestant. EEOC v. Kamehameha Sch./Bishop Estate, 990 F.2d 458 (9th Cir. 1993).
- In 1976, Roanoke Valley Christian Schools added a “head of household” supplement to their teachers' salaries – but only for heads of household as determined by Scripture. For Roanoke Valley, that meant married men. According to the church pastor affiliated with the school, “[w]hen we turned to the Scriptures to determine head of household, by scriptural basis, we found that the Bible clearly teaches that the husband is the head of the house, head of the wife, head of the family.” Dole v. Shenandoah Baptist Church, 899 F.2d 1389, 1392 (4th Cir. 1990). When sued under the Equal Pay Act, Roanoke Valley claimed a right to an exemption from equal pay laws because its “head-of-household practice was based on a sincerely-held belief derived from the Bible.” Id. at 1397.

- In 1966, three African-American residents of South Carolina brought a suit against Piggie Park restaurants, and their owner, Maurice Bessinger, for refusal to serve them. Bessinger argued that enforcement of the Civil Rights Act of 1964's public accommodations provision violated his religious freedom "since his religious beliefs compel[led] him to oppose any integration of the races whatever." Newman v. Piggie Park Enters., Inc., 256 F. Supp. 941, 944 (D.S.C. 1966), aff'd in relevant part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 377 F.2d 433 (4th Cir. 1967), aff'd and modified on other grounds, 390 U.S. 400 (1968).

In each of these cases, entities and individuals tried to invoke the mantle of religious freedom to avoid compliance with laws designed to advance equality, and each time their claims were rejected. As these cases recognized, the right to religious liberty is not absolute. It does not give businesses or individuals carte blanche to discriminate against others, deny others their rights, ignore important laws, or foist their religious beliefs on their employees. As the District Court in South Carolina explained in rejecting the free exercise claim of a restaurant owner who refused to serve African-American customers:

Undoubtedly defendant . . . has a constitutional right to espouse the religious beliefs of his own choosing, however, he does not have the absolute right to exercise and practice such beliefs in utter disregard of the clear constitutional rights of other citizens. This court refuses to lend credence or support to his position that he has a constitutional right to refuse to serve members of the Negro race in his business establishments upon the ground that to do so would violate his sacred religious beliefs.

Newman, 256 F. Supp. at 945.

As these cases make clear, religious liberty cannot automatically trump laws that were passed to further a compelling government interest. This includes laws designed to promote equality and eradicate discrimination. See, e.g., Shenandoah Baptist Church, 899 F.2d at 1398 (religious school must comply with the Equal Pay Act, which was passed to address "serious and endemic problem of employment [gender] discrimination," which is a compelling government interest). The same is true here. As discussed above, and as the government points out in its brief, in passing the WHA, Congress sought to eradicate gender discrimination in the context of the provision of health care. See Defs.’ Mem. in Opp. to Pls.’ Mot. for Prelim. Inj. (“Defs.’ Br.”) at 23. In passing the ACA, Congress recognized that women of childbearing age pay substantially more for out-of-pocket health care than men, in part because of the costs of contraception. See supra at 2-4. These costs are significant and are a true barrier to women’s access to effective birth control; and these financial barriers are aggravated by the fact that women typically earn less than men. Id. at 4. As Congress found, ensuring women receive the same benefits as men from their employers, and equalizing the existing health care disparities between men and women, is crucial. Id. at 2-3.

This is particularly true where, as here, the benefit at issue is part and parcel of women’s equality in other aspects of their life. The impact of the inability to access contraception falls primarily on women. Access to contraception gives women control of their fertility, enabling them to decide whether and when to become a parent, and allowing women to make educational and employment choices that benefit them and their families. Women’s ability to pursue professional careers because of the ability to control whether and when to have children serves to close the wage gap between men and women. Succinctly put, “[w]omen cannot participate in society, learn, earn, govern, and thrive equally without the ability to determine whether and when to become mothers.” Cornelia T.L. Pillard, Our Other Reproductive Choices: Equality in Sex Education, Contraceptive Access, and Work-Family Policy, 56 Emory L.J. 941, 976 (2007); see also id. at 975 (recognizing the importance of accessing contraception on the ability to participate in the work force, and that without “the means to control and limit reproduction, the average woman would bear twelve to fifteen children in her lifetime”). The Supreme Court has also recognized the direct relationship between women’s reproductive health decisions and their equal participation in society: “The ability of women to participate equally in the economic and social life of the Nation has been facilitated by their ability to control their reproductive lives.”² Planned Parenthood of Se. Pa. v. Casey, 505 U.S. 833, 856 (1992).

The federal government is not the only one to recognize and act on these gender disparities and the importance to women’s equality of affordable access to contraception through employee health benefit plans. Indeed, 28 states, including Illinois, have passed laws requiring contraception coverage. 77 Fed. Reg. at 8728. Two of those states, California and New York, faced legal challenges similar to the one at issue here. The high courts of both states rejected those challenges in part because the laws were designed to eradicate gender discrimination. See Catholic Charities of Sacramento, Inc. v. Superior Court, 85 P.3d 67, 92 (Cal. 2004) (recognizing that the statute was passed to equalize health insurance costs between men and women), cert. denied, 543 U.S. 816 (2004); Catholic Charities of Diocese of Albany v. Serio, 859 N.E.2d 459, 461-62, 468 (N.Y. 2006) (noting that the purpose of the statute was to advance equal treatment of women). Those courts acknowledged legislative history similar to that here: women pay much more than men in out-of-pocket health care costs, due in part to the cost of prescription contraception. See Catholic Charities of Sacramento, Inc., 85 P.3d at 92; Catholic Charities of Diocese of Albany, 859 N.E.2d at 468. Eradicating gender discrimination and disparities in health care costs is undoubtedly a compelling government interest, as recognized by the line of cases discussed above.³ See also EEOC v. Fremont Christian Sch., 781 F.2d 1362 (9th Cir. 1986) (holding that insurance plan offered only to “head of households,” namely men or single persons, violated Title VII and the Equal Pay Act, and rejecting the school’s free exercise claim because of the compelling government interest in eradicating gender discrimination). The federal contraception rule clearly furthers the compelling government interest of eliminating gender discrimination in the workplace and ensuring gender equality.⁴

² The fact that Plaintiffs object to covering some, but not all, methods of contraception does not change the analysis. For example, Plaintiffs object to including emergency contraception (“EC”) in its employees’ health insurance plans. EC is the primary method used by a woman to prevent pregnancy after intercourse (for example, in cases of rape or contraceptive failure). See generally <http://ec.princeton.edu/>. Removing EC from health plans may hamper a woman’s ability to make decisions about her reproductive life, including the ability to select a highly effective contraception method to avoid unintended pregnancy.

II. THE CONTRACEPTION RULE DOES NOT IMPOSE A SUBSTANTIAL BURDEN ON THE PLAINTIFFS’ RELIGIOUS BELIEFS

Not only do neutral anti-discrimination laws further a compelling government interest, but as courts have held, they also minimally – if at all – burden religion. For example, in Shenandoah, the court recognized that it would be – at most – a “limited” burden to require the school to comply with the Fair Labor Standards Act (“FLSA”) and pay its female teachers the same as men. As the court recognized, “[t]he fact that [the school] must incur increased payroll expenses to conform to FLSA requirements is not the sort of burden that is determinative in a free exercise claim.” 899 F.2d at 1398. So too here. Requiring Plaintiffs to provide their employees with a health plan that includes contraception coverage does not burden Plaintiffs’ religious exercise. As the district court recently held in O’Brien v. U.S. Department of Health &

³ As the government discusses, the rule also furthers the compelling interest in ensuring that women have appropriate health care. Defs.’ Br. at 22-23.

⁴ The regulation compares to Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, which exempts certain religious entities from the prohibition on discriminating based on an employee’s religion. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-1(a). No court has ever intimated that Title VII’s exemptions render the statute unconstitutional as applied to private business owners that seek to use their religious beliefs to discriminate. Nor have the courts held that Title VII’s application only to employers with 15 or more employees renders the statute unconstitutional as applied to private business owners that seek to use their religious beliefs to discriminate. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(b). The similar logistical exemption to the contraception rule also does not undermine its constitutionality. See Defs.’ Br. at 26-29.

Human Services, the link between the contraceptive coverage requirement and the religiously prohibited behavior is simply too attenuated to amount to a substantial burden. No. 12-CV-476, 2012 WL 4481208, at *6-7 (E.D. Mo. Sept. 28, 2012), stay granted, No. 12-CV-3357 (8th Cir. Nov. 28, 2012); see also Hobby Lobby Stores v. Sebelius, 870 F. Supp. 2d 1278, 1294 (W.D. Okla. 2012) (denying motion for preliminary injunction in challenge to contraception rule because the plaintiffs were unlikely to succeed in showing that the rule imposed a substantial burden on their religion because of the “indirect and attenuated relationship” between the plaintiffs’ religious beliefs and the rule’s requirements); Korte v. Sebelius, No. 3:12-CV-1072, 2012 WL 6553996, at *10 (S.D. Ill. Dec. 14, 2012) (same); Defs.’ Br. at 20-22. The O’Brien court recognized that the contraceptive rule, which neither requires employers to physically provide contraception to their employees, nor endorse the use of contraception, does not substantially burden religious beliefs solely by requiring an expenditure of money “that might eventually be used by a third party in a manner inconsistent with [an employer’s] religious values.” O’Brien at *7; cf. Zelman v. Simmons-Harris, 536 U.S. 639, 652 (2002) (holding that school voucher program did not violate the Establishment Clause because parents’ “genuine and independent private choice” to use the voucher to send their children to religious schools broke “the circuit between government and religion”).

The O’Brien, Hobby Lobby, and Korte decisions are fully consistent with another line of cases that makes clear that Plaintiffs’ claimed injury – an objection to contributing to a health plan that provides coverage for health care services the Plaintiffs find objectionable – is not cognizable. In Goehring v. Brophy, for example, the court addressed and rejected a RFRA claim similar to Plaintiffs’ claim here. 94 F.3d 1294 (9th Cir. 1996), abrogated on other grounds by City of Boerne v. Flores, 521 U.S. 507 (1997). In that case, public university students objected to a university's requirement that they pay a registration fee on the ground that it was used to subsidize the school's health insurance program, which covered abortion care. Id. at 1297. The court rejected the plaintiffs' RFRA and free exercise claims, reasoning that the payments did not impose a substantial burden on the plaintiffs' religious beliefs. Id. at 1300. Moreover, in Tarsney v. O'Keefe, the Eighth Circuit affirmed the dismissal of a free exercise challenge by taxpayers who objected on religious grounds to the state's use of their tax dollars to pay for Medicaid recipients' medically necessary abortions. 225 F.3d 929, 932 (8th Cir. 2000). The payment of taxes that may ultimately subsidize other individuals' Medicaid abortion coverage, the court explained, was too remote an injury even to accord standing upon the plaintiffs to assert a free exercise claim. Id. at 938; accord Erzinger v. Regents of Univ. of Cal., 137 Cal. App. 3d 389, 393 (Cal. Ct. App. 1982) (“[T]he fact [that] plaintiffs may object on religious grounds to some of the services the University provides is not a basis upon which plaintiffs can claim a constitutional right not to pay a part of the fees.”). Accordingly, just like those who have objected to paying insurance premiums for an insurance plan that others may use to access abortion care, or taxes that pay for Medicaid, which may be used to cover another's abortion, Plaintiffs here cannot claim any cognizable injury by providing their employees with a health plan that covers contraception, which some employees may use.

CONCLUSION

History has a way of repeating itself. Plaintiffs are attempting to resurrect the long-discredited notion that religion can be used to trump anti-discrimination or other important laws. Plaintiffs' argument is based on the incorrect notion that religion can be used as a license to discriminate. This Court should follow the wise words from the district court in South Carolina five decades ago, and refuse to “lend credence or support” to the position that private entities have a constitutional right to refuse to comply with laws designed to eradicate discrimination.

Newman, 256 F. Supp. at 945.

For the foregoing reasons, Plaintiffs' Motion for a Preliminary Injunction should be denied.

Respectfully submitted,

s/Mary Catherine Roper

Mary Catherine Roper

PA ID No: 71107

AMERICAN CIVIL LIBERTIES FOUNDATION

OF PENNSYLVANIA

P.O. Box 40008

Philadelphia, PA 19106

(215) 592 1513 ext. 116 (tel)

(215) 592-1343 (fax)

mroper@aclupa.org

Witold J. Walczak

PA ID No.: 62976

AMERICAN CIVIL LIBERTIES FOUNDATION

OF PENNSYLVANIA

313 Atwood Street

Pittsburgh, PA 15213

(412) 681-7864 (tel)

(412) 681-8707 (fax)

vwalczak@aclupa.org

Brigitte Amiri

Pro hac vice* motion pending

AMERICAN CIVIL LIBERTIES UNION

125 Broad Street, 18th Floor

New York, NY 10004

(212) 549-2633

bamiri@aclu.org

Dated: December 20, 2012.