UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

EAMMA JEAN WOODS, et al.,

vs.

JULIE L. MYERS, et al.,

Plaintiffs,

Defendants.

CASE NO. 07cv1078 DMS (PCL)

ORDER GRANTING IN PART AND DENYING IN PART DEFENDANTS’ MOTIONS TO DISMISS
[Doc. 23, 24, 25]

Pending before the Court are two motions to dismiss Plaintiffs’ Complaint. The first was filed by Defendants Corrections Corporation of America (“CCA”) and Joe Easterling (“Easterling”) on August 14, 2007 (“CCA Motion,” Doc. 23). The second was filed by thirteen Immigrations and Customs Enforcement individuals named as Defendants (collectively, “Federal Defendants”) (“Joint Motion,” Doc. 24).¹ CCA and Easterling joined in the Joint Motion. (Doc. 25). The Court took the matter under submission without oral argument on September 28, 2007. The Joint Motion is GRANTED as to Plaintiffs Carcamo and Monteagudo-Guerrero, and DENIED as to all other Plaintiffs. The CCA Motion is DENIED in its entirety.

¹ Pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 702, Federal Defendants asked the Court to substitute Immigration and Customs Enforcement or, alternatively, Julie L. Myers, and the Division of Immigration Health Services for the individuals named as Federal Defendants in this proceeding. However, 5 U.S.C § 702 does not appear to require this; instead it allows Plaintiffs to “specify the Federal officer or officers (by name or by title) and their successors in office, personally responsible for compliance.” Thus, the Court declines to change the caption of the case.

3 Plaintiffs are eleven civil immigration detainees in the custody of U.S. Immigration and 4 Customs Enforcement (“ICE”) who are or were housed at San Diego Correctional Facility (“SDCF”), 5 a contract detention facility in Otay Mesa, California operated by CCA. Defendant Easterling is the 6 warden at that facility. All other Federal Defendants are employees of ICE sued in their official 7 capacities.

8 On June 13, 2007, Plaintiffs filed their Complaint seeking injunctive and declaratory relief and 9 alleging that deficiencies in the medical care provided at SDCF constituted a violation of their Due 10 Process Rights. (Doc. 1). In particular, Plaintiffs alleged necessary medical, dental, mental health, and 11 vision care are routinely delayed or denied. (Compl. at 11, 29-37).

12 On June 22, 2007, Plaintiffs filed a motion to certify a class representing 600-800 detainees 13 in ICE custody who are now or in the future will be confined at SDCF. (P’s Mot. for Class Cert. at 1, 14 Doc. 11). The Court will hear oral arguments and take that motion under submission within the next 15 several weeks. In the meantime, two of the eleven currently named Plaintiffs are no longer detained 16 at SDCF. Winston Alexander Carcamo (“Carcamo”) was removed to Belize on February 7, 2007, and 17 Marta Monteagudo-Guerrero (“Monteagudo-Guerrero”) was granted voluntary departure and 18 subsequently released on her own recognizance on June 22, 2007.

19 The CCA Motion asserts the Complaint against CCA and Easterling should be dismissed 20 because (1) Plaintiffs do not have standing to bring these claims against these defendants; and (2) 21 Plaintiffs have not alleged sufficient facts to state a claim for injury pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil 22 Procedure 12(b)(6). (CCA Motion at 2). Arguments in the CCA Motion focus on CCA’s and 23 Easterling’s assertions that they are not the parties responsible for providing medical services. (Id. at 24 2). The Joint Motion asserts (1) Plaintiffs Carcamo and Monteagudo-Guerrero should be dismissed 25 from the lawsuit because their claims are moot and (2) Plaintiffs have failed to state a sufficient claim 26 for relief pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6). (Joint Motion at 2).

27 28 ² The facts presented are taken from the parties’ pleadings. The Court makes no finding as to their truth.

1 II.

2 DISCUSSION

3 A. Standing

4 Article III of the United States Constitution limits the jurisdiction of federal courts to actual 5 cases or controversies. U.S. Const. Art. III. To establish a case or controversy, a plaintiff must 6 demonstrate three elements. Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 560 (1992). First, the 7 plaintiff must have suffered an “injury in fact.” Id. Second, there must be a “causal connection between 8 the injury and the conduct complained of—the injury has to be fairly traceable to the challenged action 9 of the defendant and not the result of the independent action of some third party not before the court.”
10 Id. Third, it must be “likely, as opposed to merely speculative that the injury will be redressed by a 11 favorable decision.” Id.

12 In cases where plaintiffs are asking for injunctive relief, the standing requirements tighten.
13 Plaintiffs must prove a likelihood of future, irreparable harm. It is not enough for a plaintiff in equity 14 to allege a prior injury: “[p]ast exposure to illegal conduct does not in itself show a present case or 15 controversy regarding injunctive relief... if unaccompanied by any continuing, present adverse effects.” 16 O’Shea v. Littleton, 414 U.S. 488, 496 (1974). While past wrongs can be “evidence bearing on 17 whether there is a real and immediate threat of repeated injury,” Los Angeles v. Lyons, 461 U.S. 95, 18 102 (1983), a plaintiff must generally prove there is a likelihood of a future threat of the same kind by 19 the same individuals involved in the prior wrongful conduct. See, e.g. Rizzo v. Goode, 423 U.S. 362, 20 372 (1976); Golden v. Zwickler, 394 U.S. 103, 109 (1969).

21 In Lyons, for example, the Supreme Court determined whether a plaintiff had standing to 22 pursue injunctive and declaratory relief against the City of Los Angeles. Lyons, 461 U.S. at 97. City 23 police officers in Lyons had placed plaintiff in a chokehold during a traffic stop five months prior to 24 the lawsuit. Id. at 97-98. Plaintiff sought an injunction prohibiting the use of chokeholds except in 25 situations where the proposed victim was threatening officers. Id. at 98. The court held plaintiff lacked 26 standing because he had not established a real and immediate threat that he would again be stopped 27 for a traffic violation by officers who would illegally choke him. Id. at 105. In order to establish an 28 actual controversy, the plaintiff would have had to allege that he would have had another encounter

1 with the police and assert that either (1) all police officers would always choke any citizen, or (2) that 2 the City had ordered or authorized the officers to act in such a manner. Id. at 105-106 (emphasis 3 added).

4 Here, CCA and Easterling first claim that since they do not provide medical, psychiatric, or 5 dental services to SDCF detainees, Plaintiffs cannot prove they pose a risk of future injury. As a 6 corollary, no injunction against CCA and Easterling could redress Plaintiffs' alleged injuries. Although 7 Plaintiffs do not allege CCA and Easterling are directly responsible for providing medical care, they 8 do allege these defendants have taken action that directly led to the illegal deprivation or delay of 9 Plaintiffs' medical care. For example, they allege Easterling establishes CCA's policies regarding 10 accommodating detainees with special medical needs and arranging transportation for detainees to 11 attend off-site medical appointments. (Compl. ¶ 34). They also alleged these policies are deficient.
12 (Compl. ¶ 46-47).

13 As for CCA, although Plaintiffs admit CCA has not provided medical services to detainees 14 since June 1, 2002 (Compl. ¶ 49), they also allege instances of inaction by CCA's employees after 15 being alerted to situations demanding medical care. For example, Plaintiffs allege CCA was notified 16 of an inmate's need for psychiatric attention, but took no action. Days later, the inmate committed 17 suicide. (Comp. ¶ 115). Plaintiffs also allege CCA officials were notified of an inmate's collapse, but 18 instead of performing CPR, a CCA official stood over the inmate, who was in obvious respiratory 19 distress, for 15 minutes until help arrived. The inmate died within twenty-five minutes of the incident.
20 (Compl. ¶ 124). While it is true that neither inmate in these incidents are plaintiffs in this lawsuit, these 21 allegations could support an inference that CCA has a pattern of delaying medical treatment, and the 22 alleged pattern of delay causes injury.

23 Plaintiffs must also allege that risk of harm due to delayed or denied medical treatment affects 24 Plaintiffs named in the lawsuit. To meet this requirement, the Complaint lists several plaintiffs 25 currently suffering from mental illness and chronic physical illness. (Compl. ¶ 110-115, 67-73).
26 Therefore, although CCA and Easterling are not directly responsible for inmate care, the Complaint 27 sufficiently alleges the risk of future injury arising out of conduct attributable to both parties.

28 Second, CCA and Easterling claim that in order to qualify for injunctive relief, the stricter

1 standing requirements of Lyons would require Plaintiffs to allege they are likely to “either attempt to 2 commit suicide or have a heart attack, all of CCA’s employees would have a deficient response, and 3 the deficient response would be a result of CCA’s policies.” (CCA Motion at 5). As a preliminary 4 matter, the Court must clarify the Lyons requirements. Lyons did not require all three allegations.
5 Rather, Lyons required allegations of a future “encounter with the police” along with an assertion that 6 either (1) all police officers would always choke a citizen, or (2) the City ordered or authorized police 7 officers to act in this manner– that is, the actions are a result of policy. Lyons, 461 U.S. at 106. It is 8 therefore sufficient that Plaintiffs allege, as they do, that (1) certain Plaintiffs currently suffer from 9 mental illness, depression, or medical problems likely to require an emergency response, (Compl. ¶ 10 110-115, 67-73), and (2) the delays are “routine” and entrenched in policy. (Compl. ¶ 45-46).

11 In addition, Defendant’s proposed required allegations are too specific. In Lyons, the plaintiff 12 sought an injunction barring the specific police practice of using chokeholds. Lyons, 461 U.S. at 98.
13 Thus, the Lyons court required him to allege he would again suffer a chokehold at the hands of a police 14 officer. Here, Plaintiffs seek relief from “policies, practices, acts, and omissions” giving rise to a 15 pattern of denying or delaying medical treatment in violation of the Fifth Amendment. (Compl. ¶ d.-e.
16 at 44). Thus, Plaintiffs do not have to show a likelihood of encountering exactly the same scenario 17 involving exactly the same illness. Instead, they must allege that they are likely to be injured in a 18 similar way.³ Plaintiffs do allege such a likelihood. Suicide and death by heart attack are examples of 19 the kind of injury Plaintiffs allege could result from future delays. Thus, the requirements of Lyons 20 are met. Plaintiffs have standing to pursue these claims against Defendants.

21 B. Mootness

22 Defendants contend that because Carcamo and Monteagudo-Guerrero are no longer housed at 23 SDCF, their claims are moot. (Joint Motion at 4). Plaintiffs respond that in class actions involving 24 prisoners or detainees, the removal or release of a named plaintiff, even prior to class certification,

26 ³ “Absent a sufficient likelihood that he will again be wronged in a similar way, Lyons is no 27 more entitled to an injunction than any other citizen of Los Angeles; and a federal court may not 28 entertain a claim by any or all citizens who no more than assert that certain practices of law enforcement officers are unconstitutional.” Lyons at 111. (emphasis added). This language suggests Plaintiffs must allege they will likely be future victims of the same “certain practices” alleged in the Complaint. If the “certain practices” alleged are broader than those of Lyons, the range of future injury alleged can also be broader.

1 does not moot the claims of the unnamed class member or eliminate the named plaintiff's personal 2 stake in obtaining class certification. (Opp. at 8).

3 The Supreme Court has recognized that "some claims are so inherently transitory that the trial 4 court will not have even enough time to rule on a motion for class certification before the proposed 5 representative's individual interest expires." United States Parole Comm'n, et al. v. Geraghty, 445 U.S.
6 388, 398 (1979). The Ninth Circuit, in remanding a case for decision by the district court on a similar 7 prisoner class certification motion, gave the district court the following guidance:

8 If the district court finds the claims are indeed 'inherently transitory,' then the action 9 qualifies for an exception to mootness even if there is no indication that ... current 10 class members may again be subject to the acts that gave rise to the claims. This is 11 because there is a constantly changing putative class that will become subject to these 12 allegedly unconstitutional conditions.... On the other hand, if the district court finds 13 that the class claims are not sufficiently transitory to qualify for this exception to the 14 mootness doctrine, it should then consider whether putative class members with live 15 claims should be allowed to intervene.

16 Wade v. Kirkland, 118 F.3d 667, 670 (9th Cir. 1997) (citations omitted).

17 The Court finds these class claims are not sufficiently transitory to qualify for this exception.
18 Once the class is certified, claims that become moot may no longer be dismissed on those grounds.
19 Sosna v. Iowa, 419 U.S. 393, 401-402 (1975). Even if class certification is denied, all named plaintiffs, 20 even those whose individual claims later become moot, retain standing for purposes of appealing the 21 denial. Geraghty, 445 U.S. at 404.⁴ Thus, a case that is "sufficiently transitory" must be so short in 22 duration that it will not survive the Court's decision on the class certification motion. The class 23 certification motion in this case will be heard in a matter of weeks. Plaintiffs admit "many detainees 24 spend months or years awaiting a final determination of their immigration case." (Compl. ¶ 2).
25 Currently, there are nine named representatives that have active claims. Plaintiffs have not argued that 26 any of these nine are facing immediate release. They have argued only that dismissing Carcamo's and 27 Montegudo-Guerrero's claim might induce future defendants to transfer or release all named plaintiffs 28 to render the class action moot. However, there is no evidence that Defendants' release of these two ⁴ However, the Court in Geraghty limited its holding to the appeal. "A named plaintiff whose claim expires may not continue to press the appeal on the merits until a class has been properly certified. If, on appeal, it is determined that class certification properly was denied, the claim on the merits must be dismissed as moot." 445 U.S. at 404. (emphasis added, citations omitted).

1 Plaintiffs was for any improper purpose. Moreover, the Court expresses no opinion on whether the 2 entire class claim would be dismissed if all named Plaintiffs were transferred or released. The Court's 3 action today is limited to dismissing only Plaintiffs Carcamo and Monteagudo-Guerrero from this 4 lawsuit because their individual claims are moot.

5 C. 12(b)(6) Motions to Dismiss

6 A dismissal pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6) is appropriate only if the 7 complaint contains no cognizable legal theory or an absence of sufficient facts alleged to support a 8 cognizable legal theory. Navarro v. Block, 250 F.3d 729 (9th Cir. 2001). In considering the matter, the 9 Court must accept all material allegations in the complaint, and all reasonable inferences to be drawn 10 from them as true. Cahill v. Liberty Mutual Ins. Co., 80 F.3d 336, 338 (9th Cir. 1996).

11 The parties dispute whether Plaintiffs are required to allege facts sufficient to state a claim for 12 relief under the Eighth Amendment to the United States Constitution. The Ninth Circuit applies the 13 Eighth Amendment's analysis of inadequate medical care to criminal detainees, including pre-trial 14 detainees, who otherwise derive their freedom from unconstitutional punishment from the due process 15 clauses of the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments. Lolli v. County of Orange, 351 F.3d 410 (9th Cir.
16 2003); Gibson v. County of Washoe, 290 F.3d 1175 (9th Cir. 2002); Alvarez-Machian v. U.S., 107 F.3d 17 696, 701 (9th Cir. 1996). The Eighth Amendment requires detainees to allege deliberate indifference 18 to a serious medical need. Estelle v. Gamble, 429 U.S. 97, 104 (1976). On the other hand, individuals 19 who have been involuntarily civilly committed, such as mentally ill patients, are not required to allege 20 deliberate indifference. See Youngberg v. Romeo, 457 U.S. 307, 312 n.11 (1982). Rather, "liability may 21 be imposed only when the decision by the mental health professional is such a substantial departure 22 from accepted professional judgment, practice, or standards as to demonstrate that the person actually 23 did not base the decision on such a judgment." Id. at 323.

24 The standard applicable to immigration detainees is not at all clear. A substantial legal dispute 25 exists between the parties as to whether immigration detainees should be treated as criminal, pre-trial 26 detainees, or involuntarily committed individuals. Plaintiffs note that the Ninth Circuit has, in the 27 context of appointing an attorney to an immigration detainee, recognized the civil character of certain 28 immigration detentions. Agyeman v. Corr's. Corp. of Am., 390 F.3d 1101, 1104 (9th Cir. 2004)

1 (Incarcerating a person on noncriminal charges “may be a cruel necessity of our immigration policy;
2 but if it must be done, the greatest care must be observed in not treating the innocent like a dangerous
3 criminal.”). Moreover, the Ninth Circuit has held individuals awaiting civil commitment proceedings, 4 in addition to pre-trial detainees are entitled to more “considerate treatment of confinement than 5 criminals whose conditions of confinement are designed to punish.” Jones v. Blanas, 393 F.3d 918, 931
6 (9th Cir. 2004). However, the Ninth Circuit has never squarely decided whether immigration detainees, 7 whose detention is technically civil in nature but who are nonetheless detained in part because they 8 violated immigration laws, are required to plead the Eighth Amendment standard. Regardless, since 9 Plaintiffs allege facts sufficient to meet the stricter Eighth Amendment standard, the Court need not 10 reach the question.⁵

11 The Eighth Amendment prohibits “deliberate indifference to serious medical needs.” Estelle, 12 429 U.S. at 104. Plaintiffs allege “defendants’ policies, practices, acts, and omissions with respect to 13 the provision of medical care at SDCF... constitute deliberate indifference to plaintiffs’ serious medical 14 needs.” (Compl. ¶ 138). Plaintiffs also allege each element with particularity.

15 Deliberate indifference can take the form of “intentionally denying or delaying access to medical 16 care or intentionally interfering with the treatment once prescribed.” Id. at 104-105. Plaintiffs need not 17 allege that Defendants knew of a specific risk from a specific source. “The question under the Eighth 18 Amendment is whether prison officials, acting with deliberate indifference, exposed a prisoner to a 19 sufficiently substantial risk of serious damage to his future health, and it does not matter whether the 20 risk comes from a single source or multiple sources...” Farmer v. Brennan, 511 U.S. 825, 843 (1994).⁶
21 Plaintiffs allege, inter alia, Defendants “routinely ignore requests for urgent care,” (Compl. ¶ 2),

23 ⁵ “Even when the defense presents a purely legal question, the courts are very reluctant to 24 determine disputed or substantial issues of law on a motion to strike; these questions quite properly 25 are viewed as determinable only after discovery and a hearing on the merits.” Salcer v. Envicon 26 Equities Corp., 744 F.2d 935 (2d Cir. 1984), quoting 5 C. Wright & A. Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure § 1381, at 800-01; See also Cal. Dep’t of Toxic Substances Control v. Alco Pac., Inc., 217 F. Supp. 2d 1028, 1044 (C.D.Ca. 2002). Although this is a motion to dismiss rather than a motion to strike, as there has been no hearing on the merits, the Court proceeds with the same caution.

27 ⁶In that Eighth Amendment case, the Court held it was unnecessary to prove that a prison 28 official knew “that the complainant was especially likely to be assaulted by the specific prisoner who eventually committed the assault.” It was enough that “he was aware of an obvious, substantial risk to inmate safety.” Id.

1 “persons charged with authorizing treatment delay or deny treatment in the hope that detainees will be 2 removed from the United States or released from detention sooner, rather than later,” (Compl. ¶ 45), 3 and “[t]he general principles reflected in the DIHS Benefits Package form the foundation for DIHS’s 4 pervasive practice of refusing to provide necessary medical services to immigration detainees” and 5 “reflect a policy of delay and denial of care.” (Compl. ¶ 46-47). The allegations that detainees requested 6 medical care could give rise to an inference that Defendants had knowledge of the need for care.
7 Plaintiffs’ allegations that Defendants then denied or delayed response to those requests in compliance 8 with policy thus supports an inference of deliberate indifference on the part of both individual and 9 corporate Defendants.

10 A “serious medical need” exists where “the failure to treat a prisoner’s condition could result 11 in further significant injury or the unnecessary and wanton infliction of pain.” Clement v. Gomez, 298 12 F.3d 898, 904 (9th Cir. 2002) (citations omitted). Other factors to consider include: (1) whether a 13 reasonable doctor or patient would perceive the medical need in question as important and worthy of 14 comment or treatment, (2) whether the medical condition significantly affects daily activities, and (3) 15 the existence of chronic and substantial pain.” Brock v. Wright, 315 F. 3d 158, 162 (2d Cir. 2003).
16 Plaintiffs allege, inter alia, the following medical needs with particularity: serious dental problems (Id.
17 ¶ 13), cystic growths (Id. ¶ 17), post-traumatic stress disorder with a suicide risk (Id. ¶ 11, 117), bi-polar 18 disorder and depression (Id. ¶ 112), a shattered molar (Id. ¶ 64, 100), and Hepatitis C (Id. ¶ 19, 71). A 19 jury could find any one of these medical problems to be “serious.”

20 Accordingly, Defendants’ motions to dismiss for failure to state a claim are DENIED.

IV.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, Defendants' Joint Motion to dismiss is GRANTED as to Plaintiffs Carcamo and Monteagudo-Guerrero, and DENIED as to all other Plaintiffs. CCA and Easterling's Motion to Dismiss is DENIED in its entirety.

IT IS SO ORDERED.
