

<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> FILED	<input type="checkbox"/> LODGED
<input type="checkbox"/> RECEIVED	<input type="checkbox"/> COPY
 MAR 30 2001
CLERK U S DISTRICT COURT DISTRICT OF ARIZONA
BY 	DEPUTY

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19
20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE DISTRICT OF ARIZONA

LAWRENCE J. KRUG,	)
Plaintiff,	)
v.	)	No. CV 99-362-TUC-RCC
TERRY STEWART, et al.,	)	ORDER
Defendants.	)
	)

Pending before the Court are State Defendants' Motion to Dismiss Count I, Plaintiff's Motion for Summary Judgment on Count I and Plaintiff's Petition for Injunctive Relief on Count I. Plaintiff filed a motion requesting oral argument on his Motion for Summary Judgment, which Defendants opposed. The Court finds that oral argument is not necessary due to the significant written briefing on these issues.

Plaintiff's Count I alleges that Arizona Department of Corrections ("ADOC") policy violates his right to Due Process because, as of 1997, the prison official who determines that an incoming magazine is contraband due to obscenity, is the same and

(199)

1 only person ADOC allows an inmate to ask to review that decision.<sup>1</sup> Plaintiff names
2 the following Defendants on this count: Director Stewart, Warden Gonzales, Warden
3 Flanagan, Deputy Warden Cattel, CO IV Taylor, Deputy Warden Dunn, Deputy
4 Warden Spargur, Deputy Warden Martinez, and Assistant Director Ryan. In their 5 Motion to Dismiss, Defendants made three arguments. In its May 4, 2000 Order, the 6 Court ruled that the res judicata argument based on Plaintiff's prior case, CIV 97-738-
7 TUC-RCC, was without merit, therefore, dismissal will not be granted on that basis.
8 The Court did not address the other two arguments, but requested supplemental briefing
9 on them. First, Defendants argue that Plaintiff's claim is barred by the Hook consent
10 decree, which was entered into between ten ADOC inmates and the state of Arizona in 11 the Phoenix division of this Court, Hook v. State of Arizona, CIV73-97-PHX-CAM.
12 Second, Defendants argue that they are entitled to qualified immunity from Plaintiff's
13 claim for money damages. Plaintiff opposes the motion to dismiss, and asks the Court
14 to grant him summary judgment on Count I and allow him to proceed to a jury trial on 15 damages.
16

17
18
19
20
21 Hook* consent decree

22 Defendants argue that the 1973 Hook consent decree governs the procedures for 23 the confiscation of publications sent to ADOC inmates. Because the Phoenix division
24

---

25
26 <sup>1</sup> Although Plaintiff's Complaint also characterized this as a First Amendment
27 claim, the Court indicated in its May 4, 2000 Order that it would be treated solely as a 28 Due Process claim. That was because Plaintiff is challenging the procedures used to restrict the publications he receives, not that fact that there are restrictions.

1 of this Court has continuing jurisdiction over Hook, Defendants argue that it has
2 jurisdiction over all issues related to the confiscation of publications, including
3 Plaintiff's Due Process claim. The 1973 consent decree provided that publications
4 would be excluded from the prison,
5

6 if they contain any material which is deemed obscene under applicable
7 constitutional standards. Prompt written notice will be given a resident if 8 any publications are excluded for the above reasons. Upon request, the 9 resident will be given an opportunity to discuss the reasons for the 10 exclusion with the Deputy Superintendent for Programs, whose decision 11 shall be final.

11 (Motion to Dismiss, Ex. C.)

12 First, the Court disagrees with Defendants' sweeping argument that Hook
13 controls all issues related to the exclusion of publications. The plain language of the 14 decree, which was drafted by attorneys, does not address inmate appeal rights. A 15 consent decree amounts to an injunction, which can only be enforced to the extent it
16 clearly prohibits or requires certain conduct. Gates v. Shinn, 98 F.3d 463, 468 (9th
17 Cir. 1996); see also Hook v. State of Arizona, 120 F.3d 921, 925 (9th Cir.
18 1997)(holding that district court should not modify the consent decree to include a term
19 when there is no evidence that the original parties intended to include such a provision).
20 The Hook decree provides only that an inmate may have the initial exclusion decision
21 reviewed by the Deputy Superintendent. In full compliance with Hook, ADOC officials 22 could provide review of publication exclusion decisions by either the same person who 23 made the original decision or a second person. Neither option is clearly required or 24
25
26
27
28

1 prohibited by Hook. In fact, Plaintiff contends that prior to 1997, ADOC provided
2 review by a second person but now they do not. Further, there are at least two 3 methods by which ADOC could provide a two-person review process within the 4 parameters of the Hook decree. First, the Deputy Superintendent of Programs could be 5 assigned to review someone else's exclusion decision, or second, ADOC could allow an
6 appeal from the Deputy's "final" decision.<sup>2</sup> The Court finds that whether an ADOC
7 inmate should receive a two-person review when his publication is excluded was not
8 decided in the Hook case. Under the Court's reading of Hook, the plaintiff's counsel in 9 the Hook case would not be entitled to raise the issue of appeal because the original
10 decree did not bind the parties with respect to that issue. Therefore, it is proper for an 11 inmate, such as Plaintiff Krug, to bring a separate action regarding this issue. See 12 Hiser v. Franklin, 94 F.3d 1287, 1290-91 (9th Cir. 1996).

13
14
15
16
17 Second, Defendants' argument relies on the assumption that Plaintiff Krug is 18 bound by the 1973 Hook consent decree, however, Defendants have not sufficiently 19 supported that assumption. The original 1973 Hook suit was not a class action, and in 20 1992 the Ninth Circuit explicitly held that current ADOC inmates were not parties to 21

---

22
23
24 <sup>2</sup> Defendants argue that because Hook provides that the Deputy Superintendent's 25 decision is final, allowing an additional review would violate Hook. Language that 26 provides for a final decision does not preclude a subsequent appeal, in contrast, appeals
27 are generally taken only from decisions that are deemed "final." For example, when a 28 trial judge denies a claim, the litigant may ask the judge to reconsider his decision, but if reconsideration is denied, the judge's decision is final. The litigant is then entitled to appeal the trial judge's "final" decision, which remains binding unless overturned by a higher authority.

1 the consent decree but third-party beneficiaries who had the right to seek enforcement
2 of it. Hook v. State of Arizona, 972 F.2d 1012, 1013, 1015 (9th Cir. 1992); see also
3 Frost v. Symington, 197 F.3d 348, 350 (9th Cir. 1999). It is clear from subsequent case
4 law that in 1994 there was some type of class certification in Hook, but the extent of 5 that certification is unknown and has not been presented to the Court. See Frost, 197
6 F.3d at 350 n.2, 359. There is no evidence before this Court that the 1994 class
7 certification could or did bind all inmates to the terms of the original consent decree.
8
9

10 Finally, individual claims for damages and injunctive relief are not barred by 11 prior class action suits, even if the plaintiff is a class member, particularly if the claim
12 did not accrue until after the consent decree was entered. Hiser, 94 F.3d at 1291.
13 Plaintiff's claim did not accrue until 1997, when he alleges that ADOC changed its 14 policy to assign the same person to do the initial and second stage review of incoming 15 publications. The Court rejects Defendants' argument that Hiser is distinguishable
16 from the instant case because a ruling in favor of Plaintiff would require a modification
17 of the Hook consent decree. As in Hiser, this Court has determined that the issue of an 18 appeal was never litigated in Hook and is not part of the consent decree. Therefore, a 19 ruling in favor of Plaintiff would not modify the decree, rather it would address a new 20 issue not included in the decree. Because Hook did not require or prohibit an appeal
21 from the exclusion of publications, and because Defendants have not established that 22 Plaintiff Krug is bound by Hook, Defendants' Motion to Dismiss will be denied to the 23 extent it relies on Hook's preclusive effect.
24
25
26
27
28

1 Qualified Immunity from Money Damages

2 Defendants argue that Plaintiff's request for money damages on Count I should
3
4 be dismissed because they are entitled to qualified immunity. "Government officials 5 performing discretionary functions generally are shielded from liability for civil 6 damages insofar as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or 7
8 constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known." Harlow v.
9 Fitzgerald, 457 U.S. 800, 818 (1982). The crucial determination is the "'objective
10 legal reasonableness' of the action assessed in light of the legal rules that were 'clearly
11 established' at the time it was taken." Anderson v. Creighton, 483 U.S. 635, 639
12 (1987)(quoting Harlow, 457 U.S. at 819, 818). To give relevance to the "clearly 13 established" standard, the right must be defined at a level of specificity such that the 14 official in question would know that his actions violated that right. See Anderson, 483
15 U.S. at 639-40. The unlawfulness must be clear, although the specific action does not 16 have to previously have been found unlawful. See id. at 640 (citing Mitchell v.
17 Forsyth, 472 U.S. 511, 535 n.12 (1985); Malley v. Briggs, 475 U.S. 335, 344-45 18 (1986)). Qualified immunity is a broad defense which the Supreme Court describes as 19 protecting "all but the plainly incompetent or those who knowingly violate the law."
20 Malley, 475 U.S. at 341.

21
22 The relevant inquiry is "1) Was the law governing the official's conduct clearly 23 established? 2) Under the law, could a reasonable officer have believed the conduct was 24
25 lawful?" Act Up!/Portland v. Bagley, 988 F.2d 868, 871 (9th Cir. 1993). To 26
27
28

1 determine if the right asserted by the Plaintiff was clearly defined, the court “must
2 ‘survey the legal landscape’” as it existed at the time of the conduct in question. Wood
3
4 v. Ostrander, 879 F.2d 583, 591 (9th Cir.1989)(quoting Ward v. County of San Diego,
5 791 F.2d 1329, 1332 (9th Cir. 1986)). Absent controlling precedent on point, courts
6 look to all available decisional law. See Wood, 879 F.2d at 591 (citing Capoeman v.
7
8 Reed, 754 F.2d 1512, 1514 (9th Cir. 1985)).

9 In 1974, the Supreme Court held that when a prison withholds delivery of an
10 inmate’s outgoing or incoming letter that it must accompany that decision with minimal 11 procedural safeguards. Procunier v. Martinez, 416 U.S. 396, 417 (1974), overruled on 12 other grounds by Thornburgh v. Abbott, 490 U.S. 401 (1989). One of the safeguards
13 required by Martinez is that when a letter to or from an inmate is rejected, he be “given 14 a reasonable opportunity to protest that decision, and that complaints be referred to a 15 prison official other than the person who originally disapproved the correspondence.”
16
17 416 U.S. at 418-19. The subsequent Thornburgh case, which dealt with subscription
18 magazines sent to inmates, did not overrule Martinez regarding the procedural 19 safeguards applicable to the exclusion of an inmate’s mail.<sup>3</sup> Additionally, although the 20 majority of the Martinez opinion focused on outgoing mail, the Supreme Court
21 explicitly stated that the procedural protections were applicable to an inmate’s outgoing
22
23
24

---

25 <sup>3</sup> Thornburgh overruled Martinez in that it limited its holding regarding the 26 standard of review applicable to prison regulations implicating the First Amendment. 490
27 U.S. at 413-14. Thornburgh held that a uniform standard was applicable to regulations 28 governing material mailed into the prison, regardless of the origin, and that the Martinez standard was limited to regulations governing outgoing inmate mail. Id. at 413.

1 and incoming mail. 416 U.S. at 418. Although dicta, the Supreme Court made a point
2 in Thornburgh of noting that the publication regulations at issue provided procedural 3 safeguards when an incoming publication was rejected, including the right to appeal to 4 a person other than the warden who issued the original rejection. 490 U.S. 406, n.7.<sup>4</sup>

6 Martinez held that due process protections were required because the interest of 7 inmates and their correspondents in uncensored communication arises from the First
8 Amendment and “is plainly a ‘liberty’ interest within the meaning of the Fourteenth 9 Amendment.” Id. at 418. Defendants argue that First Amendment protections do not 10 apply to obscene publications. While true, see Miller v. California, 413 U.S. 15, 23
11 (1973), Plaintiff is not contesting the fact that magazines lawfully determined to be 12 obscene under constitutional standards may be excluded, rather, he is trying to ensure 13 that due process protections are applied during the obscenity determination process.
14 “[T]here is no question that publishers who wish to communicate with those who,
15 through subscription, willingly seek their point of view have a legitimate First 16 Amendment interest in access to prisoners.” Thornburgh, 490 U.S. at 408. Because 17 inmates have a liberty interest arising from the First Amendment in receiving 18 subscription publications, due process protections also apply to such correspondence
19 when it is excluded. Other courts have found the procedural safeguards enumerated in 20 Martinez to be required when publications mailed to inmates are excluded. See e.g.

---

26
27 <sup>4</sup> This contradicts Defendants argument that in Thornburgh the warden could reject
28 publications and there was no indication that the decision could be appealed to another person.

1 Hopkins v. Collins, 548 F.2d 503, 504 (4th Cir. 1977); Aikens v. Jenkins, 534 F.2d
2 751, 755 (7th Cir. 1974).

3
4 Defendants have cited no case law and the Court is not aware of any, in which a 5 court held that the procedural protections delineated in Martinez and Thornburgh are 6 not applicable to publications sent to inmates and excluded by prison officials. In 1999,
7 the Ninth Circuit cited Thornburgh for the proposition that inmates are entitled to due
8 process when publications are excluded. Frost, 197 F.3d at 353 (finding that 9 notification of publication exclusion is constitutionally required). Although Frost was 10 not published at the time the procedures Plaintiff complains of were enacted in 1997, it
11 illustrates that the Ninth Circuit believes such procedural protections have been 12 mandated since at least 1989 when the Supreme Court issued Thornburgh. Further, the 13 ADOC regulations that Plaintiff complains of are still in effect today. The Court finds
14 that during the time period relevant to Plaintiff's Count I, Plaintiff had a clearly 15 established constitutional right to a two-person review when his publications were 16 excluded.

17
18 The Court must next consider whether, in light of the clearly established law, a 19 reasonable official could have believed he acted lawfully in not allowing Plaintiff an 20 appeal to a person other than the one who originally excluded his incoming
21 publications. Although the right to an appeal was not decided in Hook, the provisions
22 of the consent decree are relevant to determining whether a reasonable ADOC
23 employee could have believed his actions were lawful. All of the Defendants are 24
25
26
27
28

1 employees of ADOC who are required to comply with the Hook consent decree when 2 processing incoming publications for inmates. The Hook decree, which has been in 3 effect longer than either the Martinez or Thornburgh opinions, does not require an
4 appeal to a person different than the one who makes an initial exclusion decision. It
5 requires only that an inmate be allowed to seek review with the Deputy Superintendent
6 of Programs, regardless of whether he also does the initial review. Hook is a binding
7 federal court judgment, and a reasonable official could rely on that as guidance
8 regarding the process to which Plaintiff is entitled. A reasonable ADOC official could 9 have believed he acted lawfully by fully complying with the longstanding Hook decree,
10 despite the subsequent cases requiring additional procedures. Therefore, the Court will 11 grant Defendants qualified immunity on Plaintiff's request for money damages on 12 Count I. Plaintiff's Motion for Summary Judgment will be denied to the extent that it
13 requests money damages on Count I.

18 Injunctive Relief

19 In his Complaint, Plaintiff requested both injunctive relief and money damages.
20 Defendants were informed in the Court's May 4, 2000 Order that the Court would be 21 addressing the substance of Plaintiff's request for both money damages and injunctive
22 relief on the motion to dismiss and motion for summary judgment. Defendants
23 submitted no statement of facts in response to Plaintiff's Motion for Summary
24 Judgment. Below, the Court recites the undisputed facts relevant to Plaintiff's request 25 for injunctive relief. Plaintiff attests that in 1997, at ASPC-Douglas, the person who 26
27
28

1 initially determined that a magazine should be excluded based on obscenity was the
2 only person from whom the inmate could seek review of that decision. On November
3 10, 1998, Defendant Stewart issued Director's Instruction 95 ("DI 95"), which 4 superseded subsection 1.6 through 1.6.2 of Department Order 909, Inmate Mail and 5 Property, Section 909.02, Incoming Mail. The revised policy on incoming mail
6 provided that one person, the Operations Officer for Programs, was assigned to do both 7 the initial review of all incoming publications for obscenity and the only review allowed 8 of his exclusions decisions. A revised policy was adopted October 11, 1999, but the 9 relevant provisions are substantively unchanged from DI 95. During this time period,
10 Plaintiff had magazines excluded and his only right of review for the exclusion decision
11 was to request review by the same official who originally determined the publications
12 should be excluded.

13 As discussed at length in the above section on qualified immunity, when an 14 incoming publication for an inmate is excluded, prison officials are constitutionally 15 required to provide the inmate a reasonable opportunity to protest the decision to a 16 different prison official than the one who made the original exclusion decision.
17 Thornburgh v. Abbott, 490 U.S. 401, 406 (1989); Procunier v. Martinez, 416 U.S.
18 396, 418-19 (1974), overruled on other grounds by Thornburgh v. Abbott, 490 U.S.
19 401 (1989). ADOC's current policy precludes an inmate from having a publication 20 exclusion decision reviewed by a different official than the one who made the initial 21 exclusion decision. The Court determines that the policy directly violates the 22
23
24
25
26
27
28

1 constitutional requirements set forth by the Supreme Court. Therefore, Plaintiff is
2 entitled to summary judgment on his request for injunctive relief.
3

4 Plaintiff filed a separate petition requesting temporary or preliminary injunctive
5 relief. Because the Court rules today that Plaintiff is entitled to a permanent injunctive
6 relief based on his motion for summary judgment, his request for temporary injunctive 7 relief is moot and will be denied as such.
8

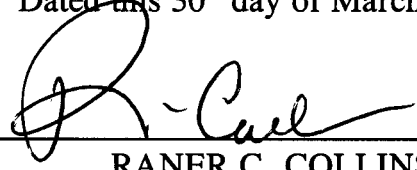

9
10
11 Accordingly, IT IS ORDERED that:
12

- 13 (1) Defendants' March 8, 2000 Motion to Dismiss Count One [Doc. #45] is 14 GRANTED IN PART, in that Defendants are granted qualified immunity 15 from Plaintiff's request for money damages on Count I, and DENIED IN 16 PART, with respect to injunctive relief;
17
- 18 (2) Plaintiff's May 4, 2000 Motion for Summary Judgment on Count One 19 [Doc. #100] is GRANTED IN PART, with respect to his request for 20 injunctive relief, and DENIED IN PART, with respect to his request for 21 money damages;
22
- 23 (3) Plaintiff's March 24, 2000 Petition for Injunctive Relief, pursuant to 24 Federal Rule 65 [Doc. #64-1, 64-2] is DENIED AS MOOT;
25
- 26 (4) Plaintiff's September 13, 2000 Motion for Oral Argument [Doc. #170] is 27 DENIED;
28

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19
20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28

- (5) Defendants' policy 909 violates the constitutional requirement that when a publication is excluded, inmates must be allowed a review of that decision by a person other than the one who made the original decision; and
- (6) Defendants shall retract any internal procedures that are inconsistent with Plaintiff's due process right to appeal the exclusion of incoming publications to a prison official other than the one who made the original exclusion decision.

Dated this 30th day of March, 2001.

_____
RANER C. COLLINS
United States District Judge