UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
EASTERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

ROBERT MITCHELL, et al.,
Plaintiffs,
v.
MATTHEW CATE, et al.,
Defendants.

No. 2:08-CV-01196

ORDER GRANTING IN PART AND DENYING IN PART DEFENDANTS' MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

This matter is before the Court pursuant to Defendants Cate, Kernan, McDonald, Giurbino, Tilton, Felker, Wright, Foulk, Vanderville, Owen and Hellwig's (collectively hereinafter referred to as "Defendants") Motion for Summary Judgment. (ECF No. 253.) Plaintiffs Mitchell, Abdullah, Quezada and Trujillo (collectively referred to as "Plaintiffs") oppose Defendants' motion. (See ECF No. 280.) The Court has carefully considered the arguments raised by both parties. For the reasons set forth below, Defendants' Motion for Summary Judgment is GRANTED IN PART and DENIED IN PART.

I. FACTUAL AND PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

Plaintiff Robert Mitchell ("Mitchell") initiated this case pro se on May 30, 2008, to challenge, among other things, a series of allegedly race-based lockdowns to which he was subjected to while imprisoned at High Desert State Prison ("HDSP") beginning on September 12,

1 2006. (Compl., ECF No. 1 at 12–14.)¹ In his complaint, Mitchell alleges that he filed 2 administrative appeals concerning the lockdown policy as it was applied to him and, in response
3 to his appeals, the prison staff informed Mitchell that it was the policy of the California 4 Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation (“CDCR”) that “when there is an incident 5 involving any race, all inmates of that race are locked up.” (ECF No. 1 at 15.) Mitchell further 6 alleged that the CDCR policy utilized ethnic groups as a classification in segmenting the inmate 7 population during the process of establishing a regular program following an incident. (ECF No.
8 1 at 15.) Mitchell alleged that he was subjected to cruel and unusual punishment in violation of 9 his Eighth Amendment rights as a result of the lockdowns and that the lockdowns violated his 10 rights to equal protection and due process. (ECF No. 1 at 17, 30–31, 38–44.) Mitchell further 11 alleged that prison officials took adverse actions against him in response to his filing of 12 grievances and lawsuits, constituting unlawful retaliation, obstruction of justice, denial of access 13 to the courts, thereby violating his due process and equal protection rights. (ECF No. 1 at 17–27, 14 32–37, 45–48.) Lastly, Mitchell asserted state-law claims of negligence and intentional infliction 15 of emotional distress. (ECF No. 1 at 48–51.)

16 The case was originally assigned to District Court Judge John A. Mendez, but was 17 reassigned to visiting Judge Richard A. Jones of the Western District of Washington in January 18 2009. (ECF No. 7.) During pretrial proceedings, the court appointed counsel for Mitchell for the 19 limited purpose of assisting him in settlement negotiations with Defendants. (ECF No. 60.)
20 Counsel for Mitchell subsequently agreed to provide continuing representation to Mitchell and 21 sought to amend the complaint in order to transform the case into a class action challenging 22 allegedly race-based lockdowns throughout California’s men’s prisons. (ECF Nos. 70, 74.)
23 Judge Jones directed the transfer of the case back to a judge within the Eastern District of 24 California, concluding that it was “far from ideal for a judge sitting in the Western District of 25 Washington to consider presiding over an action challenging policies at all of California’s 26 prisons.” (ECF No. 82 at 1.) The case accordingly was reassigned to Judge John A. Mendez and

28 ¹ Page numbers cited herein refer to those assigned by the Court’s electronic docketing system and not those assigned by the parties.

1 Magistrate Judge Edmund F. Brennan, who granted the motion to amend on September 22, 2011.
2 (ECF No. 83.) Mitchell filed the second amended complaint (“SAC”) on September 23, 2011.
3 (ECF No. 84.)

4 The SAC changed the case in the following ways:

5 (1) Adding three plaintiffs to the claims for injunctive and declaratory relief 6 regarding CDCR’s lockdown policies who seek to act, along with plaintiff, as representatives of a 7 class of “all prisoners who are now or will in the future be housed in a men’s prison under the 8 jurisdiction of CDCR and who are now or will in the future be subject to CDCR’s policy and 9 practice of implementing race-based lockdowns” and a similar class of prisoners who are or will 10 be “subject to CDCR’s policy and practice of implementing excessively lengthy lockdowns.”

11 (ECF No. 84 at 6);

12 (2) Adding Defendants CDCR Secretary Matthew Cate, CDCR Undersecretary of 13 Operations Scott Kernan, CDCR Chief Deputy Secretary for Adult Operations Terri McDonald, 14 and CDCR Director of the Division of Adult Institutions George Giurbino in their official 15 capacities to the injunctive and declaratory relief claims. (ECF No. 84 at 4–5); 16 (3) Deleting the claims for retaliation, denial of access to courts, and obstruction of 17 justice;

18 (4) and deleting Defendants T. Barnard, R. Beamon, R. Blanthorn, C. Buckley, D.
19 Cade, T. Kimzey, D. Leiber, T. Lockwood, A. Masuret, J. Mayfield, J. McClure, and J. Walker.

21 The case was further narrowed on Defendants’ November 2, 2011, motion to 22 dismiss. (ECF No. 92.) The court dismissed Mitchell’s Eighth and 14th Amendment claims 23 based on lockdowns that occurred before September 12, 2006 as unexhausted and limited his state 24 law damages claims to the period from February 28, 2007 through December 5, 2007. (ECF Nos.
25 107, 114.)

26 On March 5, 2013, Plaintiffs filed a motion to certify class as well as a motion for 27 preliminary injunction. (ECF Nos. 155, 156.) On April 3, 2013, this case was assigned to the 28 undersigned. (ECF No. 178.) Subsequently, Plaintiffs filed a request for the district court to hear

1 its pending motions for class certification and injunctive relief pursuant to Eastern District of 2 California Local Rule 302(d). (ECF No. 182.) Before the Court had an opportunity to rule on 3 Plaintiffs' request, Defendants filed their motion for summary judgment. (ECF No. 253.)

4 On August 5, 2013, the Court granted Plaintiffs request stating that "because 5 Plaintiffs' class certification and preliminary injunction motion, as well as Defendants' summary 6 judgment motion, are likely to require de novo review, this Court finds that judicial economy
7 would be best served by this Court retaining all future motions associated with this case." (ECF 8 No. 278.) Thus, this Court retained all matters associated with this case going forward and 9 addresses Defendants Motion for Summary Judgment below, prior to deciding Plaintiffs' motion 10 for class certification. See Saeger v. Pac. Life Ins. Co., 305 F. App'x 492, 493 (9th Cir. 2008)
11 ("We have previously held that, '[u]nder the proper circumstances—where it is more practicable 12 to do so and where the parties will not suffer significant prejudice—the district court has 13 discretion to rule on a motion for summary judgment before it decides the certification issue.'") 14 (quoting Wright v. Schock, 742 F.2d 541, 543–44 (9th Cir. 1984)).

15 II. STANDARD OF LAW

16 Summary judgment is appropriate when the moving party demonstrates no 17 genuine issue as to any material fact exists, and therefore, the moving party is entitled to 18 judgment as a matter of law. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c); Adickes v. S.H. Kress & Co., 398 U.S. 144, 19 157 (1970). Under summary judgment practice, the moving party always bears the initial 20 responsibility of informing the district court of the basis of its motion, and identifying those 21 portions of "the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file together 22 with the affidavits, if any," which it believes demonstrate the absence of a genuine issue of 23 material fact. Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323 (1986). "[W]here the nonmoving party 24 will bear the burden of proof at trial on a dispositive issue, a summary judgment motion may 25 properly be made in reliance solely on the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and 26 admissions on file." Id. at 324 (internal quotations omitted). Indeed, summary judgment should 27 be entered against a party who does not make a showing sufficient to establish the existence of an 28 element essential to that party's case, and on which that party will bear the burden of proof at 1 trial. Id. at 322.

2 If the moving party meets its initial responsibility, the burden then shifts to the 3 opposing party to establish that a genuine issue as to any material fact actually does exist.
4 Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 585–87 (1986); First Nat’l
5 Bank v. Cities Serv. Co., 391 U.S. 253, 288–289 (1968). In attempting to establish the existence 6 of this factual dispute, the opposing party may not rely upon the denials of its pleadings, but is 7 required to tender evidence of specific facts in the form of affidavits, and/or admissible discovery 8 material, in support of its contention that the dispute exists. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c). The opposing 9 party must demonstrate that the fact in contention is material, i.e., a fact that might affect the 10 outcome of the suit under the governing law, Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248 11 (1986), and that the dispute is genuine, i.e., the evidence is such that a reasonable jury could 12 return a verdict for the nonmoving party. Id. at 251–52.

13 In the endeavor to establish the existence of a factual dispute, the opposing party 14 need not establish a material issue of fact conclusively in its favor. It is sufficient that “the 15 claimed factual dispute be shown to require a jury or judge to resolve the parties’ differing 16 versions of the truth at trial.” First Nat’l Bank, 391 U.S. at 288–89. Thus, the “purpose of 17 summary judgment is to ‘pierce the pleadings and to assess the proof in order to see whether there 18 is a genuine need for trial.’” Matsushita, 475 U.S. at 587 (quoting Rule 56(e) advisory 19 committee’s note on 1963 amendments).

20 In resolving the summary judgment motion, the court examines the pleadings, 21 depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with any applicable 22 affidavits. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c); SEC v. Seaboard Corp., 677 F.2d 1301, 1305–06 (9th Cir.
23 1982). The evidence of the opposing party is to be believed and all reasonable inferences that 24 may be drawn from the facts placed before the court must be drawn in favor of the opposing 25 party. Anderson, 477 U.S. at 255. Nevertheless, inferences are not drawn out of the air, and it is 26 the opposing party’s obligation to produce a factual predicate from which the inference may be 27 drawn. Richards v. Nielsen Freight Lines, 602 F. Supp. 1224, 1244–45 (E.D. Cal. 1985), aff’d, 28 810 F.2d 898 (9th Cir. 1987). Finally, to demonstrate a genuine issue that necessitates a jury trial,

1 the opposing party “must do more than simply show that there is some metaphysical doubt as to 2 the material facts.” Matsushita, 475 U.S. at 586. “Where the record taken as a whole could not 3 lead a rational trier of fact to find for the nonmoving party, there is no ‘genuine issue for trial.’” 4 Id. at 587.

5 III. ANALYSIS

6 Defendants present multiple arguments in support of their motion for summary 7 judgment. The Court notes that the fifty-three pages discussing Defendants’ mootness claims 8 seem to be intertwined with its arguments as to the constitutionality of Defendants’ policy. The 9 Court has attempted to identify the individual arguments and address each one separately.
10 Therefore, to the extent that Defendants’ mootness arguments raise substantive constitutional 11 arguments, the constitutional arguments are not addressed in conjunction with Defendants’ 12 mootness arguments. Instead, the Court addresses these arguments as they are presented within 13 the section of Defendants’ brief. Accordingly, the Court first addresses the standard for mootness 14 and then addresses Defendants’ mootness arguments concerning all Plaintiffs collectively, 15 followed by a discussion of Defendants’ arguments as to each Plaintiff separately.

16 A. Defendants’ Contention that Plaintiffs’ Claims Are Moot

17 Defendants make numerous arguments contending that Plaintiffs’ claims are moot.
18 The “heavy burden” of persuading the court that the challenged conduct cannot reasonably be 19 expected to start up again lies with the party asserting mootness. Adarand Constructors, Inc. v.
20 Slater, 528 US 216, 222 (2000). “A case is moot when the issues presented are no longer ‘live’ 21 or the parties lack a legally cognizable interest in the outcome.” City of Erie v. Pap’s A.M., 529 22 U.S. 277, 287 (2000). The mootness doctrine contains two requirements: that the underlying 23 issue be “live” and that the particular party pursuing it have a “legally cognizable interest in the 24 outcome.” U.S. Parole Comm’n v. Geraghty, 445 U.S. 388, 396 (1980) (quoting Powell v.
25 McCormack, 395 U.S. 486, 496 (1969)); see also 1 Newberg on Class Actions § 2:9 (5th ed.).
26 The central issue in any mootness challenge is whether changes in the circumstances existing 27 when the action was filed have forestalled any meaningful relief. West v. Sec’y of Dept. of 28 Transp., 206 F.3d 920, 925 (9th Cir. 2000). “[T]he question is not whether the precise relief

1 sought at the time the application for an injunction was filed is still available. The question is 2 whether there can be any effective relief.” Id. at 925 (emphasis added; internal quotes omitted).
3 “Unless the prevailing party can obtain effective relief, any opinion as to the legality of the 4 challenged action would be advisory.” City of Erie, 529 U.S. at 287.

5 There are exceptions to the mootness doctrine, such as the “capable of repetition 6 doctrine” and the “class certification doctrine.” The “capable of repetition doctrine” applies 7 where the named plaintiff can make a reasonable showing that he will again be subjected to the 8 alleged illegality.” Alvarez v. Smith 558 US 87, 93 (2009). This typically arises where the issues 9 involve events of such short duration that they are over by the time the matter gets to court—e.g., 10 pregnancy, labor strikes or political campaigns. See Sosna v. Iowa, 419 U.S. 393, 401 (1975). It 11 must be shown that the challenged action was too short in duration to be fully litigated while in 12 existence and that there is a reasonable expectation that the plaintiff—or a class he or she 13 represents—will be subject to the same action again in the future. See Roe v. Wade, 410 U.S.
14 113, 125 (1973); United States v. Juvenile Male, 131 S. Ct. 2860, 2865 (2011).

15 In contrast, the class certification doctrine allows a named plaintiff’s claim which 16 has become moot after the district court has ruled on a motion for class certification, to not moot 17 the class action as a whole. Sosna, 419 U.S. at 399–401; see also U.S. Parole Comm’n v.
18 Geraghty, 445 U.S. 388, 405–06 (1980) (holding that mootness of named plaintiff’s claim after 19 denial of class certification did not moot plaintiffs’ claims so as to prevent them from appealing 20 the adverse class determination). The Supreme Court has never considered, and the lower courts 21 remain split, on the question of whether (and under what circumstances) the mootness of the 22 named plaintiff’s claims before a decision has been made on class certification will moot the class 23 action. E.g. Genesis Healthcare Corp. v. Symczyk, 133 S. Ct. 1523, 1531–32 (2013); Deposit 24 Guar. Nat’l Bank, Jackson, Miss. v. Roper, 445 U.S. 326, 329–30 (1980).

25 i. Defendants’ Arguments Concerning All Plaintiffs

26 Defendants seem to make two arguments that pertain to the alleged mootness of all 27 of the Plaintiffs’ claims. Accordingly, the Court addresses these claims first and then addresses 28 Defendants’ claims as to each individual Plaintiff below.

1 a. Decline in Prison Population

2 Defendants allege that the prison population has declined significantly since 2006, 3 and thus Plaintiffs are no longer subjected to the lengthy confinements that were prevalent at the 4 time the complaint was filed. (ECF No. 254 at 23.) The Court construes Defendants' briefing as 5 arguing that because of the decline in the prison population, Plaintiffs no longer suffer an injury, 6 and thus their claims are moot. The Court finds this argument unavailing because Defendants do 7 not allege that the race-based lockdown policy is no longer employed. Instead, Defendants argue 8 that the lockdowns are much shorter. The fact that Plaintiffs' lockdowns are shorter does not 9 negate Plaintiffs' allegations that they are locked down for no other reason than race and that the 10 alleged policy is unconstitutional. Moreover, the Eastern District of California has found as 11 recently as 2013 that California prisons are still suffering from populations over design capacity.
12 See Coleman v. Brown, 922 F. Supp. 2d 1004, 1012 (E.D. Cal. 2013) (finding that the state failed 13 to establish it had achieved durable remedy to prison crowding that prevented the state from 14 providing inmates with the mental health and medical care required by Eighth Amendment, as 15 required for vacatur of order of three-judge panel of district court, which required the state to 16 reduce prison population to 137.5% of design capacity). Therefore, this argument fails.

17 b. The CDCR's New Policy

18 Defendants also argue that the CDCR has "implemented the 'Security Threat 19 Group Prevention, Identification, and Management' pilot program (STG pilot program)." (ECF 20 No. 254 at 23.) Defendants contend that "these measures, combined with new lockdown and 21 modified program protocols implemented in October 2012 have already resulted in a dramatic 22 decrease in the number and length of lockdowns and modified programs." (ECF No. 254 at 23.)

23 Again, the Court construes Defendants' briefing to argue that Plaintiffs' case is 24 moot due to the CDCR's new policy. Although the facts alleged by Defendants support 25 Defendants' contention that the CDCR is succeeding in implementing different policies, they do 26 not negate the fact that there are material issues of fact as to whether the previous race-based 27 policy is being used in conjunction with the new policy. Furthermore, Plaintiffs have alleged that 28 the "new policy" utilizes the same race-based criteria that its predecessor employed. (ECF Nos.

1 280 at 43; Pls.’s Statement of Disputed Facts, No. 283 at ¶¶ 118–20; ECF Nos. 158 & 158-3 2 (Evenson Decl., ¶ 6 & Ex. C) at 113:13–114:12, 184:12–185:13.) As such, the Court finds that 3 summary judgment is not appropriate because material issues of fact exist concerning whether the 4 alleged unconstitutional race-based policy is still being utilized. Thus, the Court turns to 5 Defendants’ mootness claims as to the Plaintiffs individually.

6 ii. Defendants’ Mootness Arguments as to Individual Plaintiffs

7 a. Plaintiff Trujillo

8 Defendants argue that Plaintiff Trujillo (“Trujillo”) has been released on parole, 9 and thus his claims are moot. (ECF No. 254 at 21.) This Court agrees. “An inmate’s release 10 from prison while his claims are pending generally will moot any claims for injunctive relief 11 relating to the prison’s policies unless the suit has been certified as a class action.” Dilley v.
12 Gunn, 64 F.3d 1365, 1368 (9th Cir. 1995) (citing Preiser v. Newkirk, 422 U.S. 395, 402–03
13 (1975); Johnson v. Moore, 948 F.2d 517, 519 (9th Cir. 1991); Darring v. Kincheloe, 783 F.2d 14 874, 876 (9th Cir. 1986)). Plaintiffs contend that Trujillo’s claim is not moot pursuant to the 15 Ninth Circuit’s opinion in Rodriguez v. Hayes, 591 F.3d 1105 (9th Cir. 2009). In Rodriguez, the 16 Ninth Circuit held that “mootness of the Petitioner’s claim is not a basis for denial of class 17 certification, but rather is a basis for dismissal of Petitioner’s action.” Id. at 1117. There the 18 panel held “[b]ecause the district court did not dismiss Petitioner’s action, but only denied class 19 certification, we see no reason to conclude it based its denial on a finding of mootness. If it had 20 made such a finding, it would have been in error.” Id. Thus, the Ninth Circuit held that mootness 21 would be an appropriate reason to dismiss a claim, but would not be an appropriate reason to 22 deny class certification. Id. As such, Rodriguez does not bar this Court from dismissing 23 Trujillo’s claim.

24 Plaintiffs assert that although Trujillo was released on parole, he is still subject to 25 renewed detention, and thus his claims are not moot. (ECF No. 280 at 38.) However, Plaintiffs’ 26 mere assertion does not demonstrate that Trujillo has a reasonable expectation that he will return 27 to prison and in turn be subjected to the policy at issue. Accordingly, the blanket conclusion that 28 Trujillo may be subjected to the CDCR policy in the future is too speculative to prevent

1 mootness. See Dilley, 64 F.3d at 1369; Wiggins v. Rushen, 760 F.2d 1009, 1011 (9th Cir. 1985);
2 see also Reimers v. Oregon, 863 F.2d 630, 632 & n. 4 (9th Cir. 1988) (holding that plaintiff who 3 had been released from prison had no reasonable expectation of return because such return would 4 occur only if the plaintiff committed additional criminal acts). Thus, the Court finds that 5 Trujillo’s claim for injunctive relief is moot and, therefore, must be dismissed.

6 b. Plaintiff Abdullah

7 Defendants next argue that Plaintiff Abdullah’s (“Abdullah”) claims are moot 8 because the prison where he is incarcerated—California State Prison Solano—is presently under a 9 court order prohibiting the CDCR from imposing race-based lockdowns. (ECF No. 254 at 22.)
10 The Court agrees with Defendants and finds that the decision in In re Haro, No. FCR282399 11 (Cal. Super. Ct., Jan. 18, 2013), moots Abdullah’s request for injunctive relief.

12 In Haro, the Solano Superior Court held that the CDCR’s lockdown policy could
14 Johnson v. California, 543 U.S. 499 (2005). In re Haro, No. FCR282399 (Cal. Super. Ct., Jan.
15 18, 2013). Thus, the court ordered the CDCR to:

16 1) refrain from affording preferential treatment to inmates on the 17 basis of ethnicity. Specifically, respondent shall not subject any 18 inmate, including petitioner, to its “modified program” or any other 19 version of “lockdown” based on that inmate’s race or ethnic 20 background alone. While respondent, it [sic] its discretion, may 21 lockdown all or part of the prison, and may release inmates from 22 lockdown based upon individual behavior and upon informed 23 predictions of individual behavior, it may not do so on the basis of 24 ethnicity. Specifically, any assumption about affiliation with, 25 support of, or adherence to gang leadership used as a basis for 26 imposition of a modified program must be based on the specific 27 history, conduct and relationships of that inmate.

28 (2) Respondent shall no longer subject petitioner or any other inmate to any of the six classifications currently being utilized for its modified program or any other lockdown program and shall either eliminate any general classification system or otherwise recreate a classification system that is not race-based but instead relies of [sic] specific, objective factors pertaining to an inmate’s history, conduct and associations.

At a minimum, any such classification system must:

a. Preclude an inmate’s inclusion in a specific classification based on his ethnic or geographic background alone.

1 b. Preclude classification (resulting in a lockdown or similar loss of 2 privileges) to inmates who have no history of conduct or 3 associations that establish that the inmate would in fact adhere to 4 the dictates of that classification's leadership.

5 c. Preclude arbitrary classifications that unduly focus on certain 6 ethnicities (i.e. Hispanics) while wholly ignoring others (i.e.
7 Asians).

8 d. Omit classifications such as "other" that do not in any 9 meaningful manner affirmatively describe attributes of the inmate 10 receiving such a classification.

11 Id.

12 The situation here is similar to the one faced by the Ninth Circuit in Enrico's, Inc.
13 v. Rice, 730 F.2d 1250 (9th Cir. 1984). In Enrico, a cafe owner filed an action for injunctive and 14 declaratory relief against a price-posting procedure of California Department of Alcoholic 15 Beverage Control. While the case was pending before the district court, the California Court of 16 Appeals for the First District issued its decision in Lewis-Westco Co. v. Alcoholic Beverage
17 Control Appeals Bd., 136 Cal. App. 3d 829 (1983), invalidating the price-posting scheme at issue 18 as violative of the Sherman Act. Id. at 840. After the parties informed the district court of the 19 decision in Lewis-Westco, the district court asked the parties whether they still wanted the district 20 court to render a decision on their pending summary judgment motion. The parties requested a 21 ruling, and the district court granted summary judgment, finding that the price-posting procedure 22 did not constitute per se violation of the Sherman Act. The plaintiff appealed.

23 The Ninth Circuit held that in light of the California Court of Appeal's holding 24 that the price-posting scheme was invalid and the department's subsequent cessation of its 25 enforcement of the price-posting scheme, the appeal was moot for purposes of injunctive and 26 declaratory relief. Enrico's, 730 F.2d at 1254. The same principle applies here. The Solano 27 Superior Court has already granted the injunctive relief sought by Abdullah. Therefore, this 28 Court finds that it cannot offer injunctive relief that the Solano Superior Court has already granted, and thus Abdullah's claim is moot. See id.; see also City of Erie, 529 US at 287 (holding that "unless the prevailing party can obtain effective relief, any opinion as to the legality of the challenged action would be advisory").

1 Abdullah contends that his claim is not moot because, although the CDCR has 2 been ordered to stop and has made statements that it will comply, the CDCR’s past conduct 3 reflects an indifference to such orders and implies that it will continue implementing the policy.
4 (ECF No. 280 at 39–41.) This exact argument was found unpersuasive in Enrico’s. 730 F.2d at 5 1253. There, the Ninth Circuit stated “[i]n the case at bar we cannot see the threat of a real or 6 immediate injury to plaintiff that is necessary to demonstrate the existence of a case or 7 controversy. Past wrongs are not enough for the grant of an injunction.” Id. (citing City of Los 8 Angeles v. Lyons, 461 U.S. 95, 103 (1983)). As such, this Court also rejects this argument.

9 Additionally, to the extent that Abdullah contends that a federal decision is needed 10 to enforce the Superior Court’s order, this argument contradicts established principles of comity.
11 “If the equitable relief requested requires intrusive follow-up into state court proceedings, it 12 constitutes ‘a form of the monitoring of the operation of state court functions that is antipathetic 13 to established principles of comity.’” E.T. v. George, 681 F. Supp. 2d 1151, 1162 (E.D. Cal.
14 2010) (quoting O’Shea v. Littleton, 414 U.S. 488, 500 (1974)). Thus, this Court declines 15 Plaintiffs’ invitation to intervene in the California state court’s decision.²

16 c. Plaintiff Mitchell

17 Defendants contend that Plaintiff Mitchell’s (“Mitchell”) claim for injunctive relief 18 is moot because “since January 2012, Mitchell has been subjected to no more than five modified 19 programs at Folsom State Prison, all of which were exceedingly short.” (ECF No. 254 at 25.)
20 Defendants also contend that “[t]o the extent any of these modified programs affected a particular 21 racial group, they were narrowly tailored to further prison safety and security” and that “because 22 there is no reasonable expectation that Mitchell will be subjected to the same allegedly 23 unconstitutional conditions again, his claim for injunctive relief is moot.” (ECF No. 254 at 25.)
24 In support of their contention, Defendants list and provide a brief summary of the events 25 concerning the lockdowns that Mitchell was subjected to during 2012.

26 Defendants’ briefing seems to conflate the issue of mootness with their arguments

27 _____
28 ² Because the Court dismisses Abdullah’s claim, there is no need to address Defendants’ other contentions that Abdullah was not subjected to excessively lengthy, race-based lockdowns or modified programs.

1 concerning whether the policy is unconstitutional. In fact, Defendants use much of their eighty-2 eight page brief recounting specific lockdown events as they pertain to each of their arguments.
3 Because these arguments are inextricably intertwined in the briefing, the Court will briefly 4 address Defendants' assertions as they pertain to their mootness arguments and will address in 5 more detail Defendants' substantive arguments in later sections of this Order. In doing so, the 6 Court has attempted to provide an abridged version of the facts pertaining to specific lockdowns 7 below:

8 December 29, 2011 modified program at Folsom State Prison
9 (FSP-11-12-019)

10 On December 29, 2011, a riot involving 50 to 60 Black and White 11 inmates took place in Folsom State Prison's #1 Dining Room.
12 (DUF 17; see also Decl. Cahayla at ¶ 7 & Ex. A.) #1 Dining Room 13 is a relatively small dining area, seating approximately 120 inmates.
14 (Decl. Cahayla at ¶ 7.) Therefore, almost half of the inmates in the 15 #1 Dining Room for the evening meal were involved in this 16 particular riot. (Id.) Facing significant security risks, prison 17 officials placed all Black and White inmates (and their cell 18 partners) throughout the institution on modified program pending 19 an investigation and Administrative Review. (Id.; see also DUF 18, 20 Cahayla Decl. Ex. A.) . . . Based on the investigation results and the 21 inmate population's positive behavior and conduct, it was 22 determined that all Black and White inmates (and their cell 23 partners) in Housing Unit 1 could return to a complete normal 24 program at 1:00 a.m. on January 5, 2012. (Id.)

25 (ECF NO. 254 at 25.) Defendants stated that this incident was a "race riot" that necessitated a 26 race-based lockdown. (ECF No. 254 at 26.) In further support of their contention that the policy 27 is narrowly tailored, Defendants stated:

28 [O]nly the involved racial groups were placed on modified program while prison staff investigated which inmates or disruptive groups were involved and whether future violence between the warring racial groups would continue if the modified program were lifted.
By limiting the modified program to the involved racial groups, officials narrowly tailored the modified program to further prison safety and security.

29 February 25, 2012 modified program at Folsom State Prison
30 (FSP-12-02-001)

31 On February 25, 2012, Folsom State Prison officials implemented a 32 modified program after an inmate battery with a weapon took place,

1 resulting in the inmate's death. (DUF 21.) As a result of this 2 incident, all 2,829 inmates in all housing units across the institution 3 were placed on modified program pending an investigation and 4 Administrative Review. (Id; see also Decl. Cahayla at ¶ 9 & Ex.
5 B.) . . . On February 27, 2012, only inmates in Housing Unit 2 and 6 all White inmates throughout the institution remained on modified 7 program. (DUF 23.) On February 29, 2012, the modified program
8 was narrowed to White inmates only. (DUF 24.) By March 2, 9 2012, the circumstances surrounding the incident had been 10 thoroughly investigated and addressed and all inmates were 11 returned to a complete normal program. . . . because Mitchell lived 12 in Housing Unit 1 at the time, the modified program would have 13 only affected Mitchell for two days. (DUF 26, DUF 23; see also 14 Decl. Cahayla at ¶ 9 & Ex. B.) A two-day denial of yard time is not 15 unconstitutional. See Hayward, 629 F.2d at 603. And for those two 16 days, Mitchell was not locked down “solely on account of his race” 17 because the modified program did not separate racial groups. It 18 affected all inmates from all housing units at Folsom State Prison.
19 (DUF 22.) Accordingly, modified program #FSP-12-02-001 did not 20 violate Mitchell's Eighth or Fourteenth Amendment rights.

23 March 6, 2012 modified program at Folsom State Prison (FSP-24 12-03-003)

25 On March 6, 2012, approximately 100 Black inmates violently 26 rioted on the main recreation yard at Folsom State Prison. (DUF 27 27.) Only Black inmates were involved in the riot. (Decl. Cahayla 28 at ¶ 11.) Immediately after the riot, Folsom State Prison's warden initiated a modified program that affected all Black inmates to ensure their safety while correctional staff tried to determine why the riot happened and whether more violence among Black inmates was likely to occur. (DUF 28; see also Decl. Cahayla at ¶ 11 & Ex.
C.) On March 7, 2012, less than twenty-four hours later, the modified program was amended so that it only impacted the three involved disruptive groups: the Crips, the Bloods, the Bay Area affiliates, and their cell partners. (DUF 29.) All other Black inmates were released to normal program. (Id.) Because Mitchell allegedly celled with a Blood during this time, this modified program ostensibly affected him. (Decl. Sullivan at ¶ 9 and Ex. H [Mitchell Dep. Excerpts] at 98:6-10, 14-18.) . . . On March 20, 2012, the investigation revealed there was no further tension between the affected groups. (Decl. Cahayla at ¶ 11 & Ex. C.) Therefore, the modified program was terminated and all of the affected gang members and their cell partners in Housing Unit 1 returned to normal program. (Id; see also DUF 33.) Modified program #FSP-12-03-003 lasted about two weeks. (Decl. Cahayla at ¶ 11 & Ex. C.)

29 (ECF No. 27–28.) Defendants contend that the two-week modified program was not 30 unconstitutional because “it was implemented in the narrowest degree possible to re-establish

1 prison security and to ensure the safety of inmates and staff. Only members from the Black 2 inmate population were involved in the large riot so inmates of other races were not placed on 3 modified program. (ECF No. 28.)

4 July 16, 2012 modified program at Folsom State Prison
5 (FSPCUS-12-005)

6 On July 16, 2012, a riot occurred on the Folsom State Prison main 7 yard basketball court involving 10-15 Black inmates affiliated with 8 the Bay Area and Crip disruptive groups. (DUF 34.) Given the 9 scale of the incident, a Code 3 alarm was announced over the 10 institutional radio, requesting the immediate assistance of all 11 available prison staff. (Decl. Cahayla at ¶ 13.) All inmates 12 affiliated with these disruptive groups and their cell partners were 13 placed on modified program pending an investigation and 14 Administrative Review. (Id; see also DUF 34.) This modified 15 program affected 429 gang-affiliated Black inmates and their cell 16 partners —35% of the Black inmate population at Folsom State 17 Prison at the time. (Decl. Cahayla at ¶ 13.)

18 (ECF No. 254 at 29.) Defendants again argue that this modified program was not 19 unconstitutional because it was “implemented in a narrowly tailored manner and under 20 circumstances in which such a measure was necessary to protect the safety of inmates and staff,” 21 and further that it “was not ‘race based’ because it only placed members of the Bay Area 22 Affiliates and the Crips gang on modified program, and not a racial group.” (ECF No. 254 at 30.)

23 October 12, 2012 modified program at Folsom State Prison
24 (FSP-CUS-12-010)

25 On October 12, 2012, a riot involving 9 inmates affiliated with the 26 Blood disruptive group erupted on Folsom State Prison’s main 27 exercise yard. (DUF 37.) This modified program did not affect 28 Mitchell because he previously testified that his cell partner affiliated with the Bloods moved shortly after the March 6, 2012 riot and he has not since been celled with an inmate affiliated with the Bloods. (Decl. Sullivan at ¶ 9 & Ex. H [Mitchell Dep.
Excerpts] at 99:21-23;100:2; 104:21-24; 105:11-21.)

(ECF No. 254 at 30.)

25 October 16, 2012 modified program at Folsom State Prison
26 (FSP-CUS-12-011)

27 On October 16, 2012, Folsom State Prison staff discovered 28 numerous uncontrolled weapons in a Common Area. (DUF 39.) Accordingly, all 2,456 inmates throughout the institution were placed on modified program pending an investigation and

1 Administrative Review. (DUF 40; see also Decl. Cahayla at ¶ 18 & 2 Ex. F.) . . . All inmates returned to normal program at 1:00 A.M. on 3 October 23, 2012, once prison staff verified that any unrest among 4 general population inmates had subsided. (Id.; see also DUF 41.)
5 Modified program #FSP-CUS-12-011 lasted about one week.
6 (Decl. Cahayla at ¶ 18.)

7 (ECF No. 254 at 30–31.)

8 In sum, Defendants seem to assert that Mitchell’s claim is moot because the 9 lockdowns were narrowly tailored and thus did not violate Mitchell’s constitutional rights.
10 Defendant’s argument goes to the merits of Mitchell’s claim and thus does not support 11 Defendant’s assertion that Mitchell’s claim is moot. Moreover, Defendants’ arguments 12 concerning the merits fail to allege that this policy is the least restrictive option, i.e. that 13 Defendants considered any alternatives to a race-based policy. See Wygant v. Jackson Bd. of 14 Educ., 476 U.S. 267, 280 (1986) (“Under strict scrutiny the means chosen to accomplish the 15 State’s asserted purpose must be specifically and narrowly framed to accomplish that purpose.
16 Racial classifications are simply too pernicious to permit any but the most exact connection 17 between justification and classification.”) (quotation marks and citations omitted); see also 18 Crawford v. Lungren, 96 F.3d 380, 386 (9th Cir. 1996) (“To pass constitutional muster, content-19 based restrictions must be the least restrictive alternative available.”) Although courts normally 20 apply deferential review standards to prison policies, the U.S. Supreme Court has consistently 21 refused to apply this standard where racial classification is at issue. See Johnson v. California, 22 543 U.S. 499, 500 (2005). Defendants have failed to show that the policy meets the strict scrutiny 23 standard.

24 Furthermore, Defendants’ contention that they have implemented a new policy 25 does not suffice to moot Mitchell’s claims because Mitchell has presented evidence that the 26 CDCR’s policy of using racial classification to impose lockdowns has not been changed by the 27 new policy. (See ECF No. 280 at 43 (citing Ex. C, ECF No. 158-3 at 184:1–6.)) Consequently, 28 because Defendants have not offered evidence that the race-based policy is now defunct, there is nothing speculative about the likelihood that the policy will be utilized in the future.
Furthermore, the blanket statements offered by Defendant—“[t]he [new] policy states that

1 officials shall not target a specific racial or ethnic group unless it is necessary and narrowly 2 tailored to further a compelling government interest, such as restoring security and order after an 3 incident or protecting the health and safety of the inmates and staff” —employs the language used 4 in the legal standard for strict scrutiny, but fails to provide any evidence that the policy is actually 5 narrowly tailored. (See ECF Nos. 297 at 21, 238 at ¶ 42.) In fact Defendant’s blanket statements
6 conflict with statements made in the declaration of Associate Director for the High Security 7 Mission at the CDCR Kelly Harrington. She stated that in an emergency situation, the new policy 8 allows the Warden to “implement, on a short-term basis (typically up to two weeks), a modified 9 program or lockdown that separates inmates on the basis of race or ethnicity.” (ECF No. 238 at ¶ 10 42.) Thus, there is a material issue of fact as to whether the race-based policy at issue is currently 11 being applied or may be applied to Mitchell in the future. Therefore, Mitchell’s claims are not 12 moot.

13 d. Plaintiff Quezada³

14 Defendants contend that Plaintiff Quezada’s (“Quezada”) claims are moot because 15 since 2012, Quezada has only been subjected to one modified program (lockdown), which 16 affected Facilities 4A1, 4A2, and 4B and was not based on ethnicity. (ECF No. 254 at 31.)
17 Again, as discussed above, this argument fails because Defendants do not show that the CDCR no 18 longer utilizes a race-based lockdown policy. The fact that Quezada had not been subjected to a 19 lockdown in 2012 does not negate the fact that Quezada was subjected to race-based lockdowns 20 in February 2010, December 2010 and January 2011. (ECF No. 84 at ¶¶ 59–60.) Nor does it 21 show that the lockdown policy is not still being utilized, and that Quezada is unlikely to continue 22 to be subjected to such lockdowns in the future. Furthermore, Quezada disputes Defendants’ 23 contention that the lockdown was not based on ethnicity. Specifically, Quezada alleges that Kern 24 Valley State Prison imposed a lockdown on all prisoners who were racially classified as “Other” 25 after an incident involving a prisoner classified as “Asian Other.” (ECF No. 84 at ¶ 57.)
26 Quezada further alleges that this incident resulted in him being locked down solely based on his

27 ³ Defendants’ memorandum in support of summary judgment (ECF No. 254) refers to Plaintiff Quezada as 28 “Quesada.”

1 classification as “Hispanic Other.” (ECF No. 84 at ¶¶ 56–57.) The lockdown allegedly lasted for 2 90 days, during which Quezada was “typically confined to his cell for 24-hours per day, deprived 3 of outdoor exercise, and deprived of visits with his family.” (ECF No. 84 at ¶¶ 57–60.) For the 4 foregoing reasons, the Court finds that Defendants have not met their burden of showing that a 5 live controversy no longer exists, and therefore, Quezada’s claims are not moot. Consequently, 6 the Court next addresses Defendants’ arguments concerning their affirmative defenses.

7 B. Defendants’ § 1983 Affirmative Defenses

8 Defendants allege that they are entitled to summary judgment on numerous 9 affirmative defense theories concerning specific Defendants. The Court addresses each claim 10 individually below.

11 i. Respondeat Superior

12 In this case at issue, Defendant Tilton (“Tilton”) is the former Secretary of CDCR 13 and is being sued in his individual capacity. (ECF No. 84 at ¶ 18.) Defendants contend that 14 Tilton cannot be held liable for Mitchell’s § 1983 claims because he was not involved in the 15 implementation, modification, or termination of the modified programs at High Desert State 16 Prison, and further that the doctrine of respondeat superior does not apply to § 1983 claims. (ECF 17 No. 254 at 40.) In response, Plaintiffs argue that the record reflects that as Secretary of the 18 CDCR Tilton was required to approve all lockdown or modified programs that:

19 (1) [affected] all housing units/sub-facilities within a facility’s 20 security perimeter for more than 24 hours.

21 (2) A lockdown or modified program of fewer than all housing 22 units/sub-facilities within a facility’s security perimeter is to exceed 23 72 hours.

24 (3) The suspension of a facility’s major program or operation is to 25 exceed 72 hours; e.g., an academic or career technical education 26 program, visiting program, yard operation, or dining room 27 operation.

26 Cal. Code Reg., tit. 15 § 3383(c). In addition, Plaintiffs cite to the CDCR’s 2007 policy (ECF 27 No. 158-9) and the deposition of the current CDCR Secretary, Jeffrey A. Beard (ECF No. 284-2) 28 in support of their allegation that Tilton implemented the prison lockdowns. The CDCR’s 2007

1 Policy states:

2 Pursuant to the California Penal Code, the Secretary of the 3 California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation (CDCR) 4 through the various institutions is charged with the incarceration of 5 these individuals sentenced to state prison. In keeping with this 6 responsibility, the Secretary, through the individual Wardens and 7 the Division of Adult Institutions (DAI), shall establish and 8 maintain unlock procedural guidelines.

9 (ECF No. 158-9 at 1.) Likewise, Mr. Beard testified that although the lockdown policy was put 10 into place before he became Secretary, “by virtue of his position, [he] would then be responsible 11 for all the policies.” (ECF No. 284-2 6:10–12.) In response, Defendants argue that Plaintiffs’ 12 opposition relies on Tilton’s supervisory status and that Plaintiffs cannot establish the causal link 13 necessary for liability. (ECF No. 297 at 23.)

14 The Civil Rights Act under which this action was filed provides:

15 Every person who, under color of [state law] ... subjects, or causes 16 to be subjected, any citizen of the United States ... to the 17 deprivation of any rights, privileges, or immunities secured by the 18 Constitution ... shall be liable to the party injured in an action at 19 law, suit in equity, or other proper proceeding for redress.

20 42 U.S.C. § 1983. The statute requires that there be an actual connection or link between the 21 actions of the defendants and the plaintiff’s alleged deprivation. Rizzo v. Goode, 423 U.S. 362, 22 371 (1976). “A person ‘subjects’ another to the deprivation of a constitutional right, within the 23 meaning of § 1983, if he does an affirmative act, participates in another’s affirmative acts or 24 omits to perform an act which he is legally required to do that causes the deprivation of which 25 complaint is made.” Johnson v. Duffy, 588 F.2d 740, 743 (9th Cir. 1978). Supervisory personnel 26 are customarily not liable under § 1983 for the actions of their employees under a theory of 27 respondeat superior. Thus, when a named defendant holds a supervisory position, the causal 28 link between him and the claimed constitutional violation must be specifically alleged. See Fayle
v. Stapley, 607 F.2d 858, 862 (9th Cir. 1979); Mosher v. Saalfeld, 589 F.2d 438, 441 (9th Cir.
1978); Brooks v. Felker, 2:08-CV-2512 KJM KJN, 2011 WL 4898189 (E.D. Cal. Oct. 13, 2011).
“Supervisors can be held liable for: (1) their own culpable action or inaction in the training, supervision, or control of subordinates; (2) their acquiescence in the constitutional deprivation of 1 which a complaint is made; or (3) for conduct that showed a reckless or callous indifference to the 2 rights of others.” Cunningham v. Gates, 229 F.3d 1271, 1292 (9th Cir. 2000) (citing Larez v. City

3 of Los Angeles, 946 F.2d 630, 646 (9th Cir. 1991)). Accordingly, to establish liability, Plaintiffs 4 must offer specific facts to satisfy one of the prongs. Vague and conclusory allegations 5 concerning an official’s involvement in civil rights violations are not sufficient. See Ivey v. Bd. of 6 Regents, 673 F.2d 266, 268 (9th Cir. 1982).

7 Defendants’ primary argument is that Brooks v. Felker, 2011 WL 4898189, at *4, 8 held that the Secretary of the CDCR could not be held liable for a policy that violates inmates’ 9 civil rights. The Court finds that Defendants’ reliance is misplaced. In Brooks, the district court 10 denied a prisoner’s request to amend his complaint to add the Secretary of the CDCR as a 11 defendant in his equal protection claim. In making this determination, the district court 12 considered that Defendants had supplied a declaration stating that the Secretary had “no role in 13 the decision to implement, modify or terminate the lockdowns,” and further found that the 14 “plaintiff failed to demonstrate diligence or good cause to add these defendants or proposed new 15 claims concerning CDCR regulations.” Id. at *3–4. Here, Plaintiffs have supplied the Court not 16 only with a policy stating that the Secretary must approve lockdowns, but also the testimony of 17 the current Secretary stating that he is responsible for all policies per his position. In contrast, 18 Defendants have not provided evidence that Titlon was not involved in approving the lockdowns.
19 Thus, the Court finds that Tilton’s involvement in the lockdowns constitutes a material issue of 20 fact and Defendants have not met their burden under Celotex. 477 U.S. at 323 (holding that 21 pursuant to summary judgment practice, the moving party always bears the initial responsibility 22 of demonstrating the absence of a genuine issue of material fact.)

23 ii. Qualified Immunity

24 Individual Defendants Felker, Vanderville, Owen, Hellwig, Titlon, Foulk, and 25 Wright⁴ assert that qualified immunity bars Plaintiffs’ § 1983 claims because Defendants did not 26 violate Plaintiffs’ constitutional rights and further that there was no clearly established law

28 ⁴ Plaintiffs have sued Defendants Felker, Vanderville, Owen, Hellwig, Titlon, Foulk, and Wright in their individual capacity. (See ECF No. 84 at ¶¶ 18–24.)

1 holding that their conduct was unconstitutional at the time of the alleged violations. (ECF No. 254
2 at 72–74.) In response, Plaintiffs assert that Defendants did violate Plaintiffs’ constitutional 3 rights and further that the policy at issue is governed by clearly established law established prior 4 to the time frame at issue. (ECF No. 280 at 69.) Since Plaintiffs’ claims include both violations 5 of the Fourteenth and Eighth Amendment, the Court first addresses the legal standard for 6 qualified immunity and then addresses each alleged constitutional violation separately.

7 “Qualified immunity balances . . . the need to hold public officials accountable 8 when they exercise power irresponsibly and the need to shield officials from harassment, 9 distraction, and liability when they perform their duties reasonably.” Pearson v. Callahan, 555 10 U.S. 223, 231 (2009). The doctrine of qualified immunity insulates government officials⁵ from 11 civil damages in § 1983 litigation “insofar as their conduct does not violate clearly established 12 statutory or constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known.” Pearson, 555 13 U.S. at 231 (citing Harlow v. Fitzgerald, 457 U.S. 800, 818 (1982)). Qualified immunity is an 14 affirmative defense; the burden of pleading it rests with the defendant. Crawford-El v. Britton, 15 523 U.S. 574, 586–87 (1998) (citing Gomez v. Toledo, 446 U.S. 635, 639–41 (1980)).
16 Furthermore, because qualified immunity is “an immunity from suit rather than a mere defense to 17 liability . . . it is effectively lost if a case is erroneously permitted to go to trial.” Pearson, 555 18 U.S. at 231 (citing Mitchell v. Forsyth, 472 U.S. 511, 526 (1985) [hereinafter Forsyth]).
19 Accordingly, the Supreme Court has repeatedly stressed the importance of resolving immunity 20 questions at the earliest possible stage in litigation. Id. at 233–34 (“Because qualified immunity 21 protects government officials from suit as well as from liability, it is essential that qualified 22 immunity claims be resolved at the earliest possible stage of litigation.”) (citing Forsyth, 472 U.S.
23 at 526). In resolving the question of qualified immunity on a motion for summary judgment, the

24
25 ⁵ Qualified immunity protects only individuals, not municipalities or other governmental entities.
26 Leatherman v. Tarrant County Narcotics Intelligence and Coordination Unit, 507 U.S. 163, 166 (1993). Because 27 defendants who are sued in their official capacity stand in the same shoes as the entity itself, qualified immunity does 28 not apply. See, e.g., Hallstrom v. City of Garden City, 991 F.2d 1473, 1482 (9th Cir. 1993) (“A municipality (and its employees sued in their official capacities) may not assert a qualified immunity defense to liability under Section 1983.” (citing Owen v. City of Independence, 445 U.S. 622, 638 (1980); Kentucky v. Graham, 473 U.S. 159, 165–68 (1985))). Therefore, the Court considers only the claims against the defendants sued in their individual capacities.

1 court must view the facts in the light most favorable to the plaintiff (see Schwenk v. Hartford, 204
2 F. 3d 1187, 1198 (9th Cir. 2009), and can only grant the motion if defendants present evidence 3 that would entitle them to a “directed verdict if the evidence went uncontroverted at trial.”
4 Houghton v. South, 965 F.2d 1532, 1536 (9th Cir. 1992).

5 The determination of qualified immunity requires a two-step test: (1) whether facts 6 alleged, taken in the light most favorable to the injured party, show the defendants’ conduct 7 violated a constitutional right; and (2) whether the right was clearly established. Lacey v.
8 Maricopa County, 693 F.3d 896, 915 (9th Cir. 2012) (en banc). The first prong of the qualified 9 immunity analysis is distinct from the inquiry on the merits of the constitutional violation.
10 Saucier v. Katz, 533 U.S. 194, 201 (2001); see also Forsyth, 472 U.S. at 527–28 (1985) (“A 11 claim of immunity is conceptually distinct from the merits of the Plaintiff’s claim that his rights 12 have been violated.”).

13 In deciding the second prong, the Court considers whether the contours of the right 14 were sufficiently clear at the time that the action occurred so that a “reasonable official would 15 understand that what he is doing violates that right.” Mendoza v. Block, 27 F.3d 1357, 1361 (9th 16 Cir. 1994) (quoting Anderson v. Creighton, 483 U.S. 635, 640 (1987)). The Supreme Court has 17 referred to decisions of the Court of Appeals when enquiring whether a right is clearly 18 established. See Boyd v. Benton Cnty., 374 F.3d 773, 781 (9th Cir. 2004); Forsyth, 472 U.S. at 19 533; Davis v. Scherer, 468 U.S. 183, 191–192 (1984). “For a constitutional right to be clearly 20 established, its contours ‘must be sufficiently clear that a reasonable official would understand 21 that what he is doing violates that right.’” Hope v. Pelzer, 536 U.S. 730, 739 (2002) (quoting 22 Anderson, 483 U.S. at 640). Thus, the Court makes a decision based on the reasonableness of an 23 officer’s understanding based on the applicable law. See id.; Boyd, 374 F.3d at 781. “However, 24 a victim’s constitutional rights may be clearly established in the absence of a case ‘on all fours 25 prohibiting [the] particular manifestation of unconstitutional conduct [at issue].’” Id. (quoting 26 Deorle v. Rutherford, 272 F.3d 1272, 1286 (9th Cir. 2001)). Where an officer’s conduct “is so 27 patently violative of the constitutional right that reasonable officials would know without 28 guidance from the courts that the action was unconstitutional, closely analogous pre-existing case

1 law is not required to show that the law is clearly established.” Id. (quoting Deorle, 272 F.3d at 2 1286) (internal quotation marks omitted).

3 The Court decides in its discretion whether to address the first or second prong 4 first. See Pearson, 555 U.S. at 237. However, if the Court initially addresses the first prong and 5 finds that no constitutional right was violated under the alleged facts, the inquiry ends and 6 defendants prevail. Saucier, 533 U.S. at 201.

7 a. Eighth Amendment Claim

8 Because the Court finds that the second prong of the two-part test is dispositive as 9 to Defendants’ qualified immunity claim under the Eighth Amendment, the Court addresses the 10 second prong first.

11 The parties disagree as to whether a lack of exercise for extended periods of time 12 was a clearly established Eighth Amendment violation at the time of the underlying allegations.
13 Defendants cite Norwood v. Cate, No. 1:09-cv-0030-AWI-GBC, 2012 WL 3143928, at * 15
14 (E.D. Cal. Aug. 1, 2012), in support of its contention that the deprivation of exercise was not 15 clearly established as violating the Eighth Amendment throughout the 2006–2007 time period at 16 issue.⁶ In response, Plaintiffs contend that numerous Ninth Circuit opinions on point were 17 published prior to the alleged violations. (ECF No. 280 at 71.) Thus, this issue turns on whether 18 the deprivation of exercise was a clearly established Eighth Amendment violation throughout the 19 2006–2007 time period at issue.

20 “In the Ninth Circuit, we begin our inquiry by looking to binding precedent.”
21 Boyd, 374 F.3d at 781; see also Capoeman v. Reed, 754 F.2d 1512, 1514 (9th Cir. 1985). If the 22 right is clearly established by decisional authority of the Supreme Court or of this Circuit, our 23 inquiry should come to an end. See Boyd, 374 F.3d at 781. In 2009, the Ninth Circuit decided 24 Norwood v. Vance, 591 F.3d 1062 (9th Cir. 2010) (amended opinion) [hereinafter Vance], in 25 which the panel reversed the district court’s denial of the defendant’s motion for summary

26 _____
27 ⁶ The Court notes that this case does discuss whether the denial of outdoor exercise has been clearly 28 established as an Eighth Amendment violation. However, this case was vacated by a subsequent opinion, see
Norwood v. Cate, No. 1:09-cv-00330-AWI-SAB, 2013 WL 524270 (E.D. Cal. Feb. 11, 2013), and is thus not properly citable.

1 judgment, finding that defendant officials were entitled to qualified immunity. In Vance, a state
2 inmate brought a §1983 action, alleging that corrections officials violated the Eighth Amendment 3 by depriving him of outdoor exercise. Id. The prison initiated the lockdowns after a number of 4 serious inmate assaults on staff. Id. at 1065. During the lockdowns, inmates were confined to 5 their cells and normal programs were suspended while officials investigated the violence. Id.
6 The case went to trial and a jury found that defendants violated Norwood’s Eighth Amendment 7 right to outdoor exercise. Id. at 1066. Defendants appealed the verdict contending that the 8 district court erred in not providing defendants’ proposed jury instruction. Id.

9 The Ninth Circuit found that the trial court had erred in not giving the instruction, 10 but found that remanding for a new trial was unnecessary because defendants were entitled to 11 qualified immunity. Id. at 1067–68. In determining whether it would be clear to a reasonable 12 officer that denying outdoor exercise was unlawful in a situation where officers were trying to 13 curtail and prevent imminent violence, the Ninth Circuit held that “[t]he extraordinary violence 14 gripping the prison threatened staff and inmates alike, and there was a serious risk that gangs
15 would press unaffiliated inmates like Norwood into service [i.e., recruiting unaffiliated prisoners 16 to participate in prison riots].” Id. at 1068. Thus, the Ninth Circuit held that the officers acted 17 reasonably in implementing the lockdowns. In doing so, the panel discussed Allen v. Sakai, 48 18 F.3d 1082 (9th Cir. 1995),⁷ and petitioner’s reliance on it in arguing that depriving him of 19 exercise violated his Eighth Amendment right:

20 Allen does not hold that a prisoner’s right to outdoor exercise is 21 absolute and infeasible, or that it trumps all other considerations. Plaintiffs in Allen survived summary judgment because prison 22 officials there relied on “inconsequential logistical concerns” to justify denying outdoor exercise. Defendants here had substantial 23 reasons for imposing the lockdowns: They were attempting to restore order during a series of brutal attacks, some lethal or nearly 24 so.

25 Id. at 1068–69 (internal citations omitted). Thus, the panel concluded that a reasonable officer 26 could have believed that the restriction of outdoor exercise was consistent with the Eighth

27 ⁷ In Allen, the Ninth Circuit found that prison officials were not entitled to qualified immunity where they 28 denied prisoners exercise based on logistical issues. Allen did not address whether such lockdowns would violate the Eighth Amendment if imposed in response to incidents of violence within a prison.

1 Amendment: “[c]ertainly, no authority clearly established the contrary.” Id. at 1700.

2 Again in 2011, the Ninth Circuit was charged with determining whether it would 3 be clear to a reasonable officer that denying outdoor exercise was unlawful in the wake of violent 4 prison inmate conditions. See Noble v. Adams, 646 F.3d 1138 (9th Cir. 2011). In Noble, a 5 prisoner, who resided in the Substance Abuse Treatment Center (“SATF”) at Corcoran State 6 Prison during 2002 and 2003, claimed that he suffered violation of his rights under the Eighth 7 Amendment when he was denied outdoor exercise pursuant to lockdown procedures precipitated 8 by prison riots. Id. The district court denied defendant officials’ summary judgment motion on 9 the merits and their qualified immunity assertion as to part of the lockdown time frame. The 10 Ninth Circuit reversed the district court, holding that:

11 We conclude pursuant to what is now known as prong 2 of the 12 Saucier v. Katz test, that it was not clearly established in 2002—nor 13 is it established yet—precisely how, according to the Constitution, 14 or when a prison facility housing problem inmates must return to normal operations, including outside exercise, during and after a state of emergency called in response to a major riot, here one in which inmates attempted to murder staff.

15 Noble, 646 F.3d at 1142–43 (emphasis added) (internal citations omitted).

16 Here, the conduct complained of occurred in 2006 and 2007 in response to 17 numerous violent attacks or threats. As such, the conduct complained of falls within the time line 18 specified by the Ninth Circuit as not having clearly established law on point. Plaintiffs have not 19 presented, nor has this Court found, any case law that contradicts Vance and Noble.⁸ Therefore, 20 the Court defers to prison officials’ judgment so long as that judgment does not manifest either
21 deliberate indifference or an intent to inflict harm. See Noble, 646 F.3d at 1143; Vance, 591 F.3d 22 at 1069 (holding that prison officials are entitled to “wide-ranging deference”). Defendants have 23 ⁸ The case law prior to Vance and Noble yields varying results and therefore does not provide a consensus.

24 Compare Jones v. Garcia, 430 F. Supp. 2d 1095, 1102–03 (S.D. Cal. 2006) (finding no Eighth Amendment violation 25 where prisoner was denied outdoor exercise for ten months); Hayes v. Garcia, 461 F. Supp. 2d 1198, 1201, 1207–08
26 (S.D. Cal. 2006) (same for nine-month denial of outdoor exercise); Hurd v. Garcia, 454 F. Supp. 2d 1032, 1042–45
27 (S.D. Cal. 2006) (same for five-month denial); with Thomas v. Ponder, 611 F.3d 1144, 1151–52 (9th Cir. 2010) 28 (“Exercise is one of the most basic human necessities protected by the Eighth Amendment. Like food, it is ‘a basic human need protected by the Eighth Amendment.’” (quoting Keenan v. Hall, 83 F.3d 1083, 1091 (9th Cir. 1996))); Hayward v. Proconier, 629 F.2d 599, 603 (9th Cir. 1980) (denial of outdoor exercise may give rise to Eighth Amendment violation even in response to emergency conditions); Spain v. Proconier, 600 F.2d 189, 199 (9th Cir.
1979) (“There is substantial agreement among the cases in this area that some form of regular outdoor exercise is extremely important to the psychological and physical well-being of the inmates.”)

1 presented information concerning the numerous lockdowns and the events that precipitated them,⁹ 2 as well as the measures that were taken to investigate and return the inmates to normal conditions.
3 Plaintiffs have not presented any evidence that supports a finding that the lockdowns were 4 imposed because of officials' deliberate indifference or intent to inflict harm. Thus, Defendants 5 Felker, Vanderville, Owen, Hellwig, Titlon, Foulk, and Wright are entitled to qualified immunity 6 as to Plaintiffs' Eighth Amendment claims.

7 b. Fourteenth Amendment Claim

8 Throughout Defendants' briefing, Defendants assert that the race-based lockdown 9 policy that was utilized does not violate Plaintiffs' equal protection rights under the Fourteenth 10 Amendment. Consequently, individual Defendants Felker, Vanderville, Owen, Hellwig, Titlon, 11 Foulk, and Wright move for summary judgment as to Mitchell's Fourteenth Amendment Claim 12 asserting that they are entitled to qualified immunity.

13 As referenced above, the determination as to whether one is entitled to qualified 14 immunity requires a two-step test: (1) whether facts alleged, taken in the light most favorable to 15 the injured party, show the defendants' conduct violated a constitutional right; and (2) whether

17 1. Whether a Constitutional Violation Occurred

18 Because the CDCR's policy at issue utilizes racial classification, Defendants must 19 show that the policy passes strict scrutiny for qualified immunity to apply. Johnson, 543 U.S. at 20 507. "Under strict scrutiny the means chosen to accomplish the State's asserted purpose must be 21 specifically and narrowly framed to accomplish that purpose." Wygant v. Jackson Bd. of Educ., 22 476 U.S. 267, 280 (1986). The Supreme Court's opinion in Cruz v. Beto, 405 U.S. 319, 321 23 (1972), instructs lower courts that in certain instances a race-based policy may survive strict 24 scrutiny, but to do so the policy must be shown to be a necessity. For Defendants to show that the 25 policy at issue is a necessity, they must show that there was not another viable option. Thus, 26 narrow tailoring "require[s] serious, good faith consideration of workable race-neutral alternatives 27 that will achieve [the compelling government interest]." Grutter v. Bollinger, 539 U.S. 306, 339

28 ⁹ Infra Section III(B)(c).

2 Here, Defendants have provided numerous pages of justifications for the policy at 3 issue, yet they have not shown that there is not a viable alternative. Essentially, Defendants argue 4 that because there were viable reasons for the lockdowns, the modified programs meet the 5 narrowly tailored requirement under strict scrutiny analysis. This argument does not satisfy the 6 strict scrutiny requirement because Defendants have made no showing as to whether race-neutral 7 alternatives were considered.

8 Defendants also argue in their reply brief that Plaintiffs cannot satisfy the first 9 prong under Saucier because Defendants did not act with a discriminatory purpose. (ECF No.
10 297 at 38). This contention runs afoul of established Ninth Circuit precedent. The CDCR has 11 admitted to considering race as a factor in implementing its policy, thus discriminatory intent is 12 presumed. See Walker v. Gomez, 370 F.3d 969, 974 (9th Cir. 2004) (“Plaintiff was not required 13 to prove discriminatory intent because “[t]he state admit[ted] considering race when it assign[ed] 14 inmates their cell mate.”) Thus, Defendants have not shown that a constitutional violation did not 15 in fact occur, and the Court must address the second prong of Saucier.

16 2. Clearly Established Law

17 Although Defendants assert that they are entitled to qualified immunity, they do 18 not address clearly established law as it pertains to Mitchell’s Fourteenth Amendment claim and 19 seemingly rely on their argument that a constitutional violation did not occur. (See ECF No. 254 20 at 72–74.) However, because Defendants have failed to show that no constitutional violation 21 occurred, the Court will address the second prong.

22 In 2005, the United States Supreme Court decided Johnson v. California, 543 U.S.
23 499 (2005), in which it held that strict scrutiny applies to prison policies utilizing racial 24 classification. “The need for strict scrutiny is no less important here, where prison officials cite 25 racial violence as the reason for their policy. As we have recognized in the past, racial 26 classifications ‘threaten to stigmatize individuals by reason of their membership in a racial group 27 and to incite racial hostility.’” Johnson, 543 U.S. at 507 (citing Shaw v. Reno, 509 U.S. 630, 643 28 (1993) (citing City of Richmond v. J.A. Croson Co., 188 U.S. 469, 493 (1989) (plurality 1 opinion))).

2 The actions at issue occurred during 2006 and 2007. Thus, the contours of the 3 right were sufficiently clear at the time that the action occurred so that a reasonable official would 4 understand that a policy that utilizes racial classifications violates a prisoner's equal protection 5 rights if it does not pass strict scrutiny—i.e., no viable alternative exists. Consequently, 6 Defendants cannot establish that they are entitled to qualified immunity on Plaintiffs' Fourteenth 7 Amendment claims.

8 iii. Defendants' Lack of Authority

9 Defendants also argue that Defendants Vanderville, Owen, Foulk, Wright and 10 Hellwig were not involved in the development or imposition of the modified programs that form 11 the basis of the complaint and thus are entitled to summary judgment. (ECF No. 254 at 41–44.)
12 Because the Court has already determined that these Defendants are entitled to qualified 13 immunity on Plaintiffs' Eighth Amendment claim, the Court limits the following discussion to 14 Mitchell's Fourteenth Amendment claim. For the convenience of the parties, the Court has 15 summarized the facts presented by Defendants concerning the referenced Defendants' 16 responsibilities and authority, pursuant to their positions, and subsequently addresses the 17 applicability of those facts to Defendants' argument.

18 a. Defendants Owen and Hellwig¹⁰

19 Defendants contend that Owen and Hellwig both held the position of Correctional 20 Counselor I at High Desert State Prison, and that their employment responsibilities primarily 21 included collecting data concerning whether inmates were properly classified by a classification 22 committee for a job, school, or security designation. (Decl. of J. Owen in Supp. of Defs.' Mot.
23 SJ, ECF No. 264 at ¶ 2; Decl. of D. Hellwig in Supp. of Defs.' Mot. SJ, ECF No. 259 at ¶ 2.) 24 Additionally, both Owens and Hellwig stated in their declarations that they were not involved in 25 the decision-making process to implement, continue, or discontinue a modified program and 26 further that they had no authority to order, authorize, or recommend that a modified program be

27 ¹⁰ Due to Defendants Owen and Hellwig being employed in the same position, the Court addresses 28 Defendants' contention as to Owen and Hellwig's authority together.

1 imposed. (ECF Nos. 264 at ¶ 3; 259 at ¶ 3.)

2 Plaintiffs counter that Owen and Hellwig enforced the policies and thus are liable.
3 (ECF No. 280 at 77 (citing Preschooler II v. Clark County Sch. Bd. of Trs., 479 F.3d 1175, 1183
4 (9th Cir. 2007); Karl v. City of Mountlake Terrace, 678 F.3d 1062, 1072 (9th Cir. 2012);
5 Gilbrook v. City of Westminster, 177 F.3d 839, 854 (9th Cir. 1999); Thomas v. Baca, No. CV 04-6 1493, 2006 WL 2547321 (D. Ariz. Aug. 31, 2006) (denying summary judgment for officer who 7 claimed she lacked ultimate authority to grant cell reassignment because “she obviously had the 8 ability to refer Plaintiff’s request to her supervisor”); McClary v. Coughlin, 87 F. Supp.2d 205, 9 215 (W.D.N.Y. 2000) (“Personal involvement does not hinge on who has the ultimate authority 10 for constitutionally offensive decisions.”); Wulf v. City of Wichita, 883 F.2d 842, 864 (10th Cir.
11 1989) (holding that sufficient personal involvement was found where defendant did not have 12 ultimate authority, but his recommendation ultimately led to unconstitutional action by another).)

13 The Court finds that the aforementioned cases cited by Plaintiff strongly support 14 Plaintiffs’ position. Further, the Ninth Circuit has clearly held that § 1983 liability can be 15 established not only by “some kind of direct personal participation in the deprivation, but also by 16 setting in motion a series of acts by others which the actor knows or reasonably should know 17 would cause others to inflict the constitutional injury.” Johnson v. Duffy, 588 F.2d 740, 743–44
18 (9th Cir. 1978). In contrast, Defendants cannot offer any legal support that Owen and Hellwig’s 19 lack of authority bars liability. In fact, Defendants do not cite one case in support of their 20 contention. Instead, Defendants seem to argue that Plaintiffs’ Second Amended Complaint does 21 not sufficiently allege that Owen and Hellwig “set acts into motion that they knew, or should have 22 known, would have resulted in harm to Mr. Mitchell.” (ECF No 297 at 23.) Thus, Defendants 23 assert that Plaintiffs’ opposition presents new arguments and the Court, therefore, should not 24 entertain this argument. Defendants’ argument is meritless. The Second Amended Complaint 25 states:

27 Vanderville, Foulk, Owen and Hellwig were responsible for 28 implementing these lockdowns, pursuant to a policy and practice implemented by Defendant Tilton. . . . Defendants Felker, Wright,

1 Vanderville, Foulk, Owen and Hellwig were aware of Mr.
2 Mitchell's medical need to exercise, but nonetheless kept Mr.
3 Mitchell on lockdown from May 2006 through December 2007, 4 preventing him from exercising as required. As a result, Mr.
5 Mitchell suffered physical injuries including muscle atrophy, loss of 6 bone density, swelling to the left leg, hip and ankle, and severe 7 pain.

8 (ECF No. 84 ¶ 50–51.) The Court finds that implementing policies can reasonably be interpreted 9 as encompassing “putting things into motion.” As such, a genuine factual dispute exists as to 10 Owen and Hellwig’s involvement in executing the policy, and Defendants’ motion for summary 11 judgment as to Owen and Hellwig is thus denied.

12 b. Vanderville

13 Mitchell alleges that Vanderville “implemented, ratified and approved race-based 14 and excessively lengthy lockdowns.” (ECF No. 84 at ¶¶ 50, 89). Defendants argue that because 15 Vanderville did not have decision making authority, Vanderville is not liable. (ECF No. 254 at 16 42.) In support, Defendants allege that Vanderville was employed at High Desert state Prison as 17 a Supervising Correctional Counselor II, from May 2006 to December 2007. (Decl. of D.
18 Vanderville in Supp. of Defs.’ Mot. for SJ, ECF No. 268 at ¶ 2.) Vanderville was responsible for 19 supervising Correctional Counselor I positions on “C” Facility, responding to inmate grievances 20 (CDC Form 602s) when necessary, assisting the Facility Captain for various assigned tasks, and 21 ensuring the overall safety and security of the institution. (ECF No. 268 at ¶ 2.) In addition to his 22 role as CC-II, Vanderville occasionally served as an acting Facility Captain for purposes of Unit
23 Classification Committee (UCC) hearings during the relevant period. (ECF No. 268 at ¶ 3.) 24 UCC hearings are held to determine initial and subsequent program assignments, changes, and 25 transfers for inmates and are composed of three members chaired by staff at the level of Facility 26 Captain or Correctional Captain. (ECF No. 268 at ¶ 3.) Additionally, because Vanderville held 27 the same supervising rank as a Facility Captain, he occasionally filled in for the Facility Captain 28 for purposes of UCC hearings. (ECF No. 268 at ¶ 3.)

Defendants argue that Vanderville is not liable because he lacks decision making authority. (See ECF No. 254 at 42.) Defendants’ position seems to ignore that Vanderville can

1 be held liable for the implementation of a policy even though he had no decision making 2 authority as to its implementation. See Preschooler II v. Clark County Sch. Bd. of Trs., 479 F.3d
3 1175, 1183 (9th Cir. 2007) (“[A] person subjects another to the deprivation of a constitutional 4 right, within the meaning of § 1983, “if he does an affirmative act, participates in another’s 5 affirmative act, or omits to perform an act which he is legally required to do that causes the 6 deprivation of which complaint is made” (quotations omitted)); Karl v. City of Mountlake
7 Terrace, 678 F.3d 1062, 1072 (9th Cir. 2012); Gilbrook v. City of Westminster, 177 F.3d 839, 854
8 (9th Cir. 1999) (“A subordinate officer who is not the final decision maker can still be liable 9 under § 1983 if he set[s] in motion a series of acts by others which the actor knows or reasonably 10 should know would cause others to inflict the constitutional injury.” (internal quotations 11 omitted)). Mitchell has alleged that Vanderville received Mitchell’s grievances and did nothing 12 to rectify the situation. (ECF No. 280 at 52.) Defendants have not offered any evidence to negate 13 Mitchell’s assertions. Thus, Defendants have not met their burden of showing that there is not a 14 material issue of fact concerning Vanderville’s involvement and liability in the alleged § 1983 15 violations, and Defendants’ motion for summary judgment as to the claims against Vanderville 16 must be denied.

17 c. Wright and Foulk

18 Like Vanderville, Plaintiffs allege that both Foulk and Wright “implemented, 19 ratified and approved race-based and excessively lengthy lockdowns in violation of Mr.
20 Mitchell’s Fourteenth Amendment right to Equal Protection.” (ECF No. 84 at ¶ 89.) Defendants 21 state that Foulk and Wright were employed as Facility Captains at High Desert State Prison 22 during the relevant time period of September 12, 2006 to December 2007. (ECF No. 254 at 44; 23 Decl. Foulk, ECF No. 263 at ¶ 1; Wright Dep. Excerpts, ECF No. 267-1 at 42–43.) Foulk 24 managed operations on Facility “C” while Wright managed operations on Facility “D.” (ECF No.
25 254 at 44; ECF No. 263 at ¶ 1; ECF No. 267-1 at 42–43.) In addition to his role as Faculty “D” 26 Captain, Wright also briefly served as an Acting Associate Warden responsible for overseeing 27 Complex 2 (Facilities “C” and “D”) at High Desert State Prison from September 2006 to January
28 2007. (ECF No. 267-1 at 44–45.)

1 Again Defendants argue that Foulk and Wright cannot be held liable because 2 “[f]acility Captains and Acting Associate Wardens . . . do not have any decision-making authority 3 to make adjustments to or terminate the lockdowns or modified programs. . . that authority rests 4 solely with the Warden.” (ECF No. 254 at 44 (citing ECF No. 238 at ¶¶ 7–8, 35).)

5 As discussed above, a lack of decision making authority does not necessarily 6 shield a defendant from liability in a § 1983 action if a defendant implemented or imposed an 7 unconstitutional policy. See Karl, 678 F.3d at 1072; Preschooler II, 479 F.3d at 1183; Gilbrook 8 v. City of Westminster, 177 F.3d at 854. As such, there exists a material issue of fact as to 9 whether Wright or Foulk’s actions make them liable for the alleged constitutional violations.
10 Consequently, Defendants’ motion for summary judgment as to the claims against Wright and 11 Foulk are hereby denied. Further, because Plaintiffs’ Eighth Amendment claims against 12 Defendants Cate, Kernan, McDonald, and Giurbino¹¹, as well as Plaintiffs’ Fourteenth 13 Amendment claims, have survived Defendants’ affirmative defenses, the Court addresses 14 Defendants’ arguments as to the merits below.

15 C. Defendants’ Contention that the CDCR’s Policy Did Not Violate 16 Plaintiffs’ Eighth and Fourteenth Amendment Rights

17 In Defendants’ Points and Authority for Summary Judgment, Defendants only 18 specifically address the facts surrounding Mitchell as to this contention. (See ECF No. 254 at 39– 19 71.) Consequently, the Court finds that Defendants’ statements do not suffice to show that 20 Quezada’s rights were not violated¹² and will thus address the specific allegations concerning

22 i. Mitchell’s Eighth Amendment Claim

23 Pursuant to 42 U.S.C. section 1983, “[e]very person who, under color of any 24 statute, ordinance, regulation, custom, or usage . . . subjects, or causes to be subjected, any citizen of 25 the United States or other person within the jurisdiction thereof to the deprivation of any rights,

26 _____
27 ¹¹ Defendants Cate, Kernan, McDonald, and Giurbino were all sued in their official capacity. (See ECF No. 84 at ¶¶ 14–17.)

28 ¹² Because the Court finds that both Abdullah and Trujillo’s claims are moot, the Court declines to address Defendants’ contentions concerning these Plaintiffs.

1 privileges, or immunities secured by the Constitution and laws, shall be liable to the party injured
2 in an action at law, suit in equity, or other proper proceeding for redress.” Section 1983 confers 3 no substantive rights itself, but rather, “provides remedies for deprivations of rights established 4 elsewhere.” City of Oklahoma City v. Tuttle, 471 U.S. 808, 816 (1985). In the instant action, 5 Mitchell alleges that the CDCR, through implementation of its policy, violated his Eight 6 Amendment right to be free from cruel and unusual punishment.

7 The Supreme Court has defined the Eighth Amendment standard as having both 8 objective and subjective components. Farmer v. Brennan, 511 U.S. 825, 834 (1994). “A prison 9 official violates the Eighth Amendment only when two requirements are met. First, the 10 deprivation alleged must be, objectively, ‘sufficiently serious’; a prison official’s act or omission 11 must result in the denial of ‘the minimal civilized measure of life’s necessities.’” Id. (citations 12 omitted). “The second requirement follows from the principle that ‘only the unnecessary and 13 wanton infliction of pain implicates the Eighth Amendment.’” Id. (citing Wilson v. Seiter, 501 14 U.S., 294, 297 (1991). “To violate the Cruel and Unusual Punishments Clause, a prison official 15 must have a ‘sufficiently culpable state of mind.’ In prison-conditions cases that state of mind is 16 one of ‘deliberate indifference’ to inmate health or safety.” Id. (quotations and citations omitted).
17 Thus, in order for Defendants to succeed, they must show that Plaintiff cannot meet one of the 18 two requirements.

19 Defendants allege that Mitchell’s claim fails because the CDCR did not subject 20 Mitchell to conditions that objectively amount to cruel and unusual punishment, and further that 21 the less-than-four-month deprivation of outdoor exercise that he was subjected to does not 22 amount to an Eighth Amendment violation. The Court addresses each of these contentions 23 separately.

24 a. Objective Requirement: Sufficiently Serious Deprivation

25 “Under the objective requirement, the prison official’s acts or omissions must 26 deprive an inmate of the minimal civilized measure of life’s necessities.” Hayes v. Garcia, 461 F.
27 Supp. 2d 1198, 1205 (9th Cir. 2006) (quoting Farmer, 511 U.S. at 834). Defendants contend that 28 the CDCR policy did not violate Mitchell’s Eighth Amendment right because denial of exercise

1 will ordinarily only constitute a substantial deprivation and thus be “sufficiently serious” if it is 2 for an extended period of time. (ECF No. 254 at 47.) Defendants argue that Mitchell’s longest 3 lockdown time period lasted for a period of less than four months. (ECF No. 254 at 56—57.)
4 Defendants further allege that in Hayes, 461 F. Supp. 2d at 1207—08, the Ninth Circuit held that 5 a nine-month deprivation of exercise did not violate a prisoner’s rights. Thus, Defendants assert 6 that the less-than-four months-time period that Mitchell was subjected to does not objectively
7 violate Mitchell’s Eight Amendment rights. (ECF No. 254 at 57.)

8 Plaintiffs argue that the numerous implemented lockdowns overlapped, which 9 resulted in Mitchell being deprived of exercise for 553 days over a 624-day period, and that 10 Mitchell was not in fact released from lockdown when Defendants allege he was released. (ECF 11 No. 280 at 53; ECF No. 283 at ¶ 150; ECF No. 285 at ¶¶ 6–14.) In response, Defendants assert 12 that Plaintiffs have no support for their contentions and that Mitchell’s Declaration is self-serving 13 and not sufficient to raise a triable issue of fact. (ECF No. 297 at 24.)

14 The Court finds that the majority of evidence presented by both sides is in the form 15 of declarations by interested parties and thus finds that it is inappropriate for the Court to make a 16 credibility determination at this juncture in the litigation. See Anderson, 477 U.S. at 249 (holding 17 that the judge’s function at the summary judgment stage is not to weigh the evidence and 18 determine the truth of the matter, but only to determine whether there is a genuine issue for trial).
19 Moreover, the Court declines Defendants’ invitation to decide that Mitchell’s Eighth Amendment 20 claim fails as a matter of law in light of Ninth Circuit precedent.

21 The Court finds that Defendants’ reliance on Hayes is misplaced because the Ninth 22 Circuit’s decision in Hayes was dependent on the fact that the plaintiff was not medically affected 23 by the alleged deprivation, and that the plaintiff complained of not being able to exercise outdoors 24 but was able to exercise indoors during the lockdown period. Thus, Mitchell’s claim is 25 distinguishable from Hayes on two grounds. First, in contrast to Hayes, Mitchell alleges that the 26 lack of exercise caused him physical harm. Second, Mitchell did not have the option of outdoor 27 or indoor exercise during the lockdown periods. Furthermore, the Ninth Circuit has repeatedly 28 held that lockdown conditions may constitute cruel and unusual punishment under the Eighth

1 Amendment. See Thomas v. Ponder, 611 F.3d 1144, 1151–52 (9th Cir. 2010) (“Exercise is one
2 of the most basic human necessities protected by the Eighth Amendment. Like food, it is ‘a basic 3 human need protected by the Eighth Amendment.’” (quoting Keenan v. Hall, 83 F.3d 1083, 1091 4 (9th Cir. 1996))); Hayward v. Proconier, 629 F.2d 599, 603 (9th Cir.1980) (holding that denial of 5 outdoor exercise may give rise to Eighth Amendment violation even in response to emergency 6 conditions); Spain v. Proconier, 600 F.2d 189, 199 (9th Cir. 1979) (“There is substantial 7 agreement among the cases in this area that some form of regular outdoor exercise is extremely 8 important to the psychological and physical well-being of the inmates.”).

9 In Allen v. Sakai, 48 F.3d 1082, 1087–88 (9th Cir. 1994), the Ninth Circuit 10 affirmed a trial court’s finding that a prisoner’s allegations that during a six-week period he had 11 been allowed only 45 minutes of outdoor exercise per week survived defendant’s motion for 12 summary judgment. The Ninth Circuit stated that the prisoner “has met the objective requirement 13 of the Eighth Amendment analysis by alleging the deprivation of what this court has defined as a 14 basic human need.” Id. at 1088. Similarly, in Lopez v. Smith, 203 F.3d 1122, 1132–33 (9th Cir.
15 2000), the Ninth Circuit held that Lopez had met the Eighth Amendment’s objective requirement 16 where he alleged that during the six-and-one-half weeks following his injury he was denied all 17 access to outdoor exercise.

18 In sum, even if Mitchell’s longest lockdown was approximately four months as 19 alleged by Defendants, a four-month deprivation may meet the objective standard articulated by 20 the Ninth Circuit. This finding in no way reflects the Court’s opinion as to whether the 21 lockdowns at issue constitute an Eighth Amendment violation in the context in which they were 22 implemented. The Court reserves judgment as to those facts for trial. The Court only finds that 23 Defendants have not met their burden of showing that as a matter of law Mitchell cannot succeed 24 in this prong.

25 b. Subjective Requirement: Deliberate Indifference

26 Defendants next contend that Plaintiffs cannot meet the deliberate indifference 27 standard required to establish an Eighth Amendment violation. “[D]eliberate indifference entails 28 something more than mere negligence, the cases are also clear that it is satisfied by something

1 less than acts or omissions for the very purpose of causing harm or with knowledge that harm will 2 result.” Farmer, 511 U.S. at 835. “Showing ‘deliberate indifference,’ involves a two part 3 inquiry. First, the inmate must show that the prison officials were aware of a ‘substantial risk of 4 serious harm’ to an inmate’s health or safety.” Thomas, 611 F.3d at 1150. Substantial risk of 5 serious harm may be established by the inmate showing that the risk posed by the deprivation is 6 obvious. See Farmer, 511 U.S. at 842 (“[A] factfinder may conclude that a prison official knew 7 of a substantial risk [to a prisoner’s health] from the very fact that the risk was obvious.”).
8 “Second, the inmate must show that the prison officials had no ‘reasonable’ justification for the 9 deprivation, in spite of that risk.” Thomas, 611 F.3d at 1150.

10 Defendants do not allege in their summary judgment motion that they were 11 unaware that the lockdowns posed a substantial risk of serious harm to Mitchell. Instead, 12 Defendants argue that Plaintiffs cannot establish the second prong of the subjective requirement 13 because Defendants had a reasonable justification for implementing modified programs, i.e., 14 safety of employees and other inmates. (ECF No. 254 at 57–62.) However, in Defendants’ reply, 15 Defendants allege that they were not aware of Mitchell’s medical needs. (ECF No. 297 at 29– 16 30.)

17 As to whether Defendants had knowledge of Mitchell’s medical needs, the Court 18 finds that there are material issues of fact precluding summary judgment. The deposition of 19 Michael Wright establishes that Mitchell’s medical records indicated that Mitchell was prescribed 20 certain leg exercises. (ECF No. 284-12 at 12–15.) There is a question as to how much of 21 Mitchell’s medical file was available in his central file which both Daniel Vanderville and Julie 22 Owen testified that they had access to.¹³ (ECF Nos. 284-7 at 11; 284-10 at 8.) Furthermore, 23 Defendant Wright testified that although Mitchell’s central file may not include Mitchell’s 24 medical documents from other institutions, he believed that High Desert would have a complete 25 medical file including documents in which doctors documented Mitchell’s prescribed leg

26
27 ¹³ Defendants Vanderville and Owen are entitled to qualified immunity as to Mitchell’s Eighth Amendment 28 claim. (infra, Section B(ii).) However, their statements as to the availability of Mitchell’s medical records support Mitchell’s contentions as to the availability of these files concerning Defendants Cates, Kernan, McDonald, and Giurbano, who are sued in their official capacity.

1 exercises. (ECF No. 284-12 at 15.) Thus, in evaluating the evidence in the light most favorable 2 to Plaintiffs, Defendants have not shown that Plaintiffs are incapable of establishing that 3 Defendants had knowledge of Mitchell’s medical condition and needs, and therefore material 4 questions of fact exist.

5 The second prong of the subjective analysis requires this Court to determine 6 whether Defendants had a reasonable justification for the deprivation in spite of the risk that the 7 lockdown conditions would cause Mitchell damage. Thomas, 611 F.3d at 1150. Defendants 8 contend that the risk was reasonable due to: (1) the violent incidents that caused Defendants to 9 implement the modified program; (2) the possibility that further violence would occur; and (3) to 10 protect the safety of the inmates. In arguing that Defendants’ actions were reasonable, 11 Defendants again provide this Court with the details of numerous lockdowns that occurred over 12 the time frame concerning this suit. Read generously, this prison record may support Defendants’ 13 assertion that they denied Mitchell access to the exercise yard for his own protection. However, it 14 is not sufficient by itself to support a grant of summary judgment. See Lopez v. Smith, 203 F.3d 15 1122, 1133 (9th Cir. 2000) (holding that denial of a prisoner’s yard access for his own protection 16 does not explain defendant’s refusal to offer some alternative opportunity for exercise.) Thus, 17 even if Defendants have shown that Mitchell was denied yard access for his own protection, it 18 does not explain why he was not given some other opportunity to exercise. See id.; Thomas, 611 19 F.3d at 1155 (“The district court’s conclusion that the prison officials’ policy was “reasonable” is 20 also highly questionable in light of the absence of any evidence in the record that the prison 21 officials considered whether there were any alternative means of providing Thomas out-of-cell 22 exercise.”).

23 Mitchell testified that he complained in writing about the lack of exercise to his 24 correctional counselor but that nothing changed. (ECF No. 284-19 at 16–18.) Viewing the 25 evidence in the light most favorable to Plaintiffs, there is a genuine issue of fact as to whether 26 Defendants considered any alternative means to the lockdowns. Thus, this Court cannot 27 determine whether the lockdown was reasonable or whether Defendants’ conduct was 28 deliberately indifferent to Mitchell’s need for outdoor exercise. Accordingly, the grant of 1 summary judgment as to Mitchell’s Eighth Amendment claims as to Defendants sued in their 2 official capacity is denied.

3 ii. Mitchell’s Fourteenth Amendment Claim

4 Again, Defendants broadly assert that the named Plaintiffs’ rights were not 5 violated because the “modified programs at issue were imposed in response to violent incidents 6 and were narrowly tailored to ensure and preserve institutional safety and security.” (ECF No.
7 254 at 39.) Defendants contend that the modified programs that were implemented between May 8 of 2006 and December 2007 did not implicate Mitchell’s Equal Protection rights. (ECF No. 254 9 at 70.) Essentially, Defendants argue that because there were viable reasons for the lockdowns, 10 the modified programs meet the narrowly tailored criteria required under strict scrutiny. In 11 support of their contention that Mitchell’s Fourteenth Amendment rights were not violated, 12 Defendants cite the United States Supreme Court’s decision in Cruz v. Beto, 405 U.S. 319 (1972).
13 “Race-based decisions made in response to the ‘necessities of prison security and discipline’ do 14 not violate the Fourteenth Amendment when they are narrowly tailored to legitimate prison 15 goals.” (ECF No. 254 at 70 (quoting Cruz, 405 U.S. at 321).) In addition, Defendants allege that 16 Plaintiffs are required to allege facts showing that Defendants acted with intent or purpose to 17 discriminate based upon membership in a protected class and that Plaintiffs have failed to show 18 such intent. (ECF No. 254 at 70–71 (quoting Hartmann v. Cal. Dep’t of Corr. & Rehab., 707 19 F.3d 1114, 1123 (9th Cir. 2013)).) The Court finds that Defendants’ reliance on these cases is 20 misplaced.

21 Defendants have acknowledged that strict scrutiny applies to Defendants’ policy 22 because it applies racial classification in determining who is subjected to modified programs.
23 (See ECF No. 254 at 63 (citing Johnson, 543 U.S. at 505).) Therefore, the burden is shifted to 24 Defendants to show that the policy meets strict scrutiny. Id. at 506 (“Under strict scrutiny, the 25 government has the burden of proving that racial classifications are narrowly tailored measures 26 that further compelling governmental interests.”); see also Adarand Constructors, Inc. v. Peña, 27 515 U.S. 200, 227 (1995). “Under strict scrutiny the means chosen to accomplish the State’s 28 asserted purpose must be specifically and narrowly framed to accomplish that purpose.” Wygant

1 v. Jackson Bd. of Educ., 476 U.S. 267, 280 (1986). As previously discussed,¹⁴ a race-based 2 policy may survive strict scrutiny, but to do so the policy must be shown to be a necessity. See 3 Cruz, 405 U.S. at 321.

4 For Defendants to show that the policy at issue is a necessity, they must show that 5 there was not another viable option. Here, Defendants have provided numerous pages of 6 justifications,¹⁵ yet, as previously addressed,¹⁶ have not alleged that there is not a viable 7 alternative. As such, this Court cannot say that Defendants have met their burden at this juncture.
8 See Fisher v. Univ. of Tex. at Austin, ___ U.S. ___, 133 S. Ct. 2411, 2420 (2013) (“The reviewing 9 court must ultimately be satisfied that no workable race-neutral alternatives would produce [the 10 desired result].”)¹⁷ Thus, Defendants’ motion for summary judgment as to Mitchell’s Fourteenth 11 Amendment claim is denied.

12 D. Other Constitutional Claims Not Fully Briefed in the SAC

13 In Defendants’ Points and Authorities in Support of Summary Judgment, 14 Defendants briefly address a number of additional constitutional claims that are mentioned within 15 Plaintiffs’ Second Amended Complaint, but are not explicitly claimed or briefed. (ECF No. 254.)
16 The Court addresses each of these contentions separately below.

25 ¹⁵ Supra Section III(A)(ii)(c).

26 ¹⁶ Supra Sections III(A)(ii)(c), III(B)(ii)(b), III(C)(ii).

27 ¹⁷ Defendants contend that Plaintiffs’ reliance on Fisher is misplaced because Fisher concerned a university’s 28 diversity admission policy and here Defendants are involved in decisions involving imminent danger and safety concerns. (ECF No. 297 at 31–32.) The Court agrees that the strict scrutiny analysis concerning this policy must be made in context to the policy’s use. However, Defendants have not provided nor is the Court aware of any case law supporting the contention that a policy can survive strict scrutiny where defendants are unable to show that they considered any alternatives.

1 i. Eighth Amendment: Deliberate Indifference to Medical Needs

2 In Defendants’ briefing, they note that “Named Plaintiffs do not explicitly bring an 3 Eighth Amendment deliberate-indifference-to-medical-needs claim.” (ECF No. 254 at 74.)
4 Defendants argue that if it is Plaintiffs’ intention to seek equitable relief for alleged inadequate 5 medical or mental health care, they would be barred pursuant to Brown v. Plata, No. 3:01-cv-6 01351-THE (N.D. Cal.) and Coleman v. Schwarzenegger, No. 2:09-cv-00520 LKK JFM (E.D.
7 Cal.). (ECF No. 254 at 75.)

8 Plata is a class action of inmates in California state prisons with serious medical 9 conditions. See generally, Plata, No. 3:01-cv-01351-THE (N.D. Cal.). Coleman is a federal 10 class action lawsuit alleging unconstitutional mental health care by the CDCR. See generally, 11 Coleman, No. 2:09-cv-00520 LKK JFM (E.D. Cal.). The Coleman class includes all inmates with 12 “serious mental disorders” who are or will be confined within the CDCR. Coleman, Case No.
13 2:09-cv-00520 LKK JFM (E.D. Cal.). In Plaintiffs’ opposition, they state that they are not 14 seeking an injunction regarding the provision of medical and mental health care. (ECF No. 280 at 15 81.) As such, this issue is moot and the Court need not address it further.

16 ii. First Amendment Rights

17 In the SAC, Plaintiffs state that during lockdowns, prisoners are unable to visit 18 with or telephone their families or participate in basic prison programs, such as religious services, 19 education programs, and drug and alcohol treatment programs. (ECF No. 84 at ¶¶ 36, 44, 51, 60.)
20 Defendants contend that arguments concerning these issues should not be entertained by the 21 Court because many of these allegations fail to state a claim, and the named Plaintiffs have not 22 pleaded these claims with any degree of specificity. (ECF No. 254 at 76–78.) In response, 23 Plaintiffs argue that just because they do not seek separate relief for each of the deprivations, they 24 are not rendered irrelevant. Plaintiffs further allege that these deprivations are directly related to 25 the alleged harm caused by Defendants’ lockdowns. (ECF No. 280 at 81.)

26 Because the allegations at issue are not pleaded as separate causes of action and 27 Plaintiffs do not seek relief as to these alleged deprivations, the Court grants Defendants’ motion 28 in so far as it finds that awarding relief as to these allegations would be inappropriate. See

1 Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678–79 (2009) (holding that a plaintiff must give the defendant
2 fair notice of what the claim is and the grounds upon which it rests). However, the Court notes 3 that the alleged deprivations may be relevant to determining whether the lockdowns amounted to 4 cruel and unusual behavior under the Eighth Amendment and thus declines Defendants’ invitation 5 to completely disregard Plaintiffs’ allegations in such context. Furthermore, to the extent that 6 Plaintiffs are trying to allege that each of these deprivations constitutes an Eighth Amendment 7 violation, the Court has already found that Defendants are entitled to qualified immunity on this 8 claim. As such, further discussion of this matter is unwarranted.

9 E. Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress

10 Under California law, recovery for intentional infliction of emotional distress 11 (“IIED”) requires a showing of: (1) extreme and outrageous conduct by the defendant; (2) with 12 the intention of causing, or reckless disregard of the probability of causing, emotional distress; (3) 13 which actually and proximately causes; (4) the plaintiff’s severe or extreme emotional distress.
14 See Christensen v. Superior Court, 54 Cal.3d 868, 903 (1991); Inland Mediation Bd. v. City of 15 Pomona, 158 F. Supp. 2d 1120, 1156 (C.D. Cal. 2001). Defendants contend that Mitchell’s IIED 16 claim fails because Mitchell has not specifically stated “what Defendants Tilton, Felker, Wright, 17 Vanderville, Foulk, Owen, and Hellwig did to cause him emotional harm, short of his general 18 allegation that Defendants . . . implemented lengthy race-based lockdowns.” (ECF No. 254 at 19 79.) More specifically, Defendants contend that nothing in Mitchell’s Second Amended 20 Complaint describes or otherwise realistically alleges “outrageous conduct” and thus Mitchell’s 21 claim fails. (ECF No. 254 at 79.) In opposition, Plaintiffs assert

22 Where “reasonable minds may differ” about whether a Defendants’ 23 conduct was extreme and outrageous, the Court may not decide the 24 matter on summary judgment; in such circumstances it is for the jury . . . to determine whether, in the particular case, the conduct has been sufficiently extreme and outrageous to result in liability.

25 (ECF No. 280 at 83.) Because the parties’ dispute only encompasses the extreme and outrageous 26 conduct requirement, the Court limits its inquiry as to whether Plaintiffs’ allegations rise to the 27 level of extreme and outrageous conduct.

28 In California, outrageous conduct has been defined as conduct which is “beyond

1 all bounds of decency; ordinary rude or insulting behavior is not enough to justify an award of 2 damages.” B. Witkin, 5 Summary of California Law: Torts § 451 (10th ed. 2005). To support a 3 claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress, the conduct must be more than “intentional
4 and outrageous. It must be conduct directed at the plaintiff, or occur in the presence of a plaintiff 5 of whom the defendant is aware.” Christensen, 54 Cal. 3d at 903.

6 Defendants contend that Plaintiffs have failed to allege a specific tortious act. This 7 argument is not well taken. As previously discussed, Plaintiffs have sufficiently pleaded that 8 Defendants implemented the policy— i.e. executed the policy. Furthermore, Plaintiffs have 9 pleaded that Mitchell informed Defendants Owen and Hellwig of his medical condition and 10 further filed grievances concerning this matter that were personally received by Vanderville.
11 (ECF No. 280 at 52.) Thus, Defendants may be liable for failing to offer Mitchell alternative 12 opportunities to exercise if such inaction is found to be outrageous. See Davidson v. City of 13 Westminister, 32 Cal. 3d 197, 210 (1982) (A failure to act may support an IIED claim if the 14 inaction is “so extreme as to exceed all bounds of that usually tolerated in a civilized 15 community.”) Both parties have acknowledged that there are no cases directly on point. While 16 Plaintiffs have presented numerous cases in which courts have found a material issue of fact due 17 to racially motivated conduct, none of these cases involve policies implemented in prisons where 18 the motivation is safety. (See ECF No. 280 at 85 (citing Robinson v. Hewlett Packard Corp., 183 19 Cal. App. 3d 1108, 1130 (1986) (evidence that a supervisor intentionally insulted an employee 20 based on his race was sufficient to raise a triable issue of material fact with respect to 21 outrageousness); Agarwal v. Johnson, 25 Cal.3d. 932, 947 (1979), disapproved on other grounds 22 by White v. Ultramar, Inc., 21 Cal. 4th 563 (1999) (evidence that a racial epithet was used against 23 and humiliated an employee was enough to support a finding of outrageousness); Alcorn v. Anbro 24 Engineering, Inc., 2 Cal. 3d 493, 496–498 (1970) (supervisor shouting racially insulting 25 comments, terminating employment and humiliating Plaintiff was enough to support a finding of 26 outrageous conduct)).)

27 “When considering the evidence on a motion for summary judgment, the court 28 must draw all reasonable inferences on behalf of the nonmoving party.” See Matsushita Elec.

1 Indus. Co., 475 U.S. at 587. The Court finds that it is difficult to determine whether the factual 2 allegations presented by Plaintiffs are outrageous enough to support plaintiffs' claim without 3 making a credibility determination and thus finds that this matter should be presented to a jury.
4 See Inland Mediation Bd. v. City of Pomona, 158 F. Supp. 2d 1120, 1157 (C.D. Cal. 2001) 5 (holding that where reasonable minds may differ as to whether conduct transcended the bounds of 6 behavior usually tolerated in a civilized society, the jury is allowed to consider whether the 7 conduct is "outrageous"). Furthermore, Defendants' briefing fails to foreclose the possibility that 8 Plaintiffs could present evidence to support their contention that Defendants' conduct meets the 9 "outrageous" requirement. As such, Defendants motion for summary judgment as to Plaintiffs' 10 IIED claim is hereby denied.

11 F. Negligence and Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress

12 To establish a cause of action for negligence, Mitchell must show that each 13 defendant: (1) owed him a duty of care; (2) breached that duty; (3) and the breach proximately 14 caused; (4) Mitchell's injuries. Burgess v. Superior Court, 2 Cal. 4th 1064, 1072 (1992); Merrill 15 v. Navegar, Inc., 26 Cal. 4th 465, 477 (2001); see also Corales v. Bennett, 567 F.3d 554, 572 (9th 16 Cir. 2009). In addition, "any complaint for damages in any civil action brought against a publicly 17 elected or appointed state or local officer, in his or her individual capacity, where the alleged 18 injury is proximately caused by the officer acting under color of law, shall allege with 19 particularity sufficient material facts to establish individual liability of the publicly elected or 20 appointed state of local officer and the plaintiff's right to recover there from." Cal. Gov. Code § 21 951 (West 2010). Thus, because Defendants Tilton, Felker, Wright, Vanderville, Foulk, Owen, 22 and Hellwig are being sued for actions they allegedly took when employed at High Desert State 23 Prison, Plaintiffs must identify "facts sufficient to establish every element of each cause of 24 action." Rakestraw v. Cal. Physicians' Serv., 81 Cal. App. 4th 39, 43 (2000).

25 Defendants seek summary judgment on Mitchell's claims for negligence and 26 negligent infliction of emotional distress ("NIED") contending that Plaintiffs have failed to 27 satisfy the heightened pleading standard (ECF No. 254 at 80) and that Defendants Tilton, Felker, 28 Wright, Vanderville, Foulk, Owen, and Hellwig did not owe Mitchell a duty of care. (ECF No.

1 254 at 82.)

2 In Defendants' motion for summary judgment, they contend that Defendants do 3 not owe Mitchell a duty of care. However, in their subsequent reply they admit that under 4 California law, an inmate who is solely dependent on his jailers due to his incarceration may be 5 owed a legal duty. (ECF No. 297 at 41.) Based on this recent admission, Defendants then 6 unconvincingly allege that such duty does not attach here and proceed to present arguments not 7 raised in their initial motion concerning whether Plaintiffs can show causation.

8 First, the Court notes that Plaintiffs' assertion that a jailer has a relationship with a 9 prisoner that creates a duty of care is correct. See Johnson v. Cate, No. 1:10-CV-00803-AWI-10 MJS, 2012 WL 1910086, at *5 (E.D. Cal. May 25, 2012), report and recommendation adopted in 11 part, No. 1:10-CV-0803-AWI-MJS, 2012 WL 3637917 (E.D. Cal. Aug. 21, 2012) (citing Lawson 12 v. Superior Court, 180 Cal. App. 4th 1372, 1389 (2010)). Therefore, by alleging that Mitchell is 13 incarcerated and that Defendants were employed in supervising him within the prison system, 14 Plaintiffs have established a duty of care. Thus, Defendants' contention that Plaintiffs have not 15 pled sufficient facts concerning a duty of care fails.

16 Furthermore, to the effect that Defendants raise new arguments concerning 17 causation in their reply brief, the Court finds such arguments inappropriate. See United States v.
18 Bohn, 956 F.2d 208, 209 (9th Cir. 1992) (noting that courts generally decline to consider 19 arguments raised for the first time in a reply brief). However, even if this Court were to entertain 20 such arguments, Defendants' contention that Mitchell had sufficient room within his cell to 21 complete the necessary exercises for his medical condition is a material issue of fact and thus is 22 not appropriate for summary judgment. As such, Defendants' motion for summary judgment as 23 to Plaintiffs' negligence and NIED claims is denied.

24 G. Discretionary Act Immunity

25 Lastly, Defendants contend that Felker, Wright and Foulk are immune from 26 Mitchell's state law claims pursuant to California Government Code § 820.2. (ECF No. 70.) The 27 Code states "a public employee is not liable for an injury resulting from his act or omission where 28 the act or omission was the result of the exercise of the discretion vested in him, whether or not

1 such discretion be abused.” Cal. Gov’t Code § 820.2. The California Code defines an employee 2 as “an officer, judicial officer as defined in Section 327 of the Elections Code, employee, or 3 servant, whether or not compensated, but does not include an independent contractor.” Cal.
4 Gov’t Code § 810.2. Accordingly, Felker, Wright and Foulk are entitled to immunity under § 5 820.2 if a “fair reading” of the complaint reveals allegations that they “made an actual, conscious, 6 and considered collective policy decision.” Mitchell v. Felker, No. 2:08-CV-1196 JAM EFB, 7 2012 WL 2521827, at *11 (E.D. Cal. June 28, 2012), report and recommendation adopted, No.
8 2:08-CV-1196 JAM EFB, 2012 WL 3070084, at *1 (E.D. Cal. July 27, 2012) (quoting Caldwell 9 v. Montoya, 10 Cal. 4th 972, 981 (1995). “Immunity applies only to ‘deliberate and considered 10 policy decisions, in which a conscious balancing of risks and advantages ... took place.’
11 Operational acts that merely ‘implement a basic policy already formulated’ do not receive 12 immunity.” Id. (quoting Caldwell, 10 Cal. 4th at 981) (emphasis added).

13 In deciding whether an act is a policy or operational decision, the California 14 Supreme Court has looked to whether a decision was “in the nature of a ‘basic policy decision’ 15 made at the ‘planning’ stage of City’s operations” or whether it “fell within the category of 16 routine duties incident to the normal operations of the office.” Barner v. Leeds, 24 Cal. 4th 676, 17 685 (2000); see also Sanborn v. Chronicle Pub. Co., 18 Cal.3d 406, 415 (1976). “The scope of 18 the discretionary act immunity ‘should be no greater than is required to give legislative and 19 executive policymakers sufficient breathing space in which to perform their vital policymaking 20 functions.’” Barner, 24 Cal. 4th at 685 (quoting Tarasoff v. Regents of Univ. of Cal., 17 Cal. 3d 21 425, 445 (1976)); see also AE ex rel. Hernandez v. Cnty. of Tulare, 666 F.3d 631, 639–40 (9th 22 Cir. 2012). An “employee’s normal job duties are not determinative; the burden rests with 23 government defendants to demonstrate that they are entitled to § 820.2 immunity for a specific 24 policy decision made by an employee who consciously balanced the decision’s risks and 25 benefits.” AE ex rel. Hernandez, 666 F.3d at 640.

26 These arguments have previously been raised by Defendants and subsequently 27 rejected by this Court. See Mitchell v. Felker, 2012 WL 2521827, at *11. This Court stands by 28 its original determination that whether Felker, Wright and Foulk made “deliberate and considered

1 policy decisions” with respect to the alleged lockdowns are questions of fact. Defendants’ 2 blanket assertions that Felker’s decisions were discretionary within California Government Code 3 § 820.2 because they involved personal deliberation does not demonstrate that the actions 4 conform with the legal meaning of discretion as defined by the California Supreme Court.
5 Furthermore, the fact that the Ninth Circuit has described a similar deliberation as delicate, and 6 requiring expertise in prison administration, and a careful balance of the obligation to provide for 7 prisoner and staff safety against prisoners’ rights, see Noble, 646 F.3d at 1143–44, does not 8 suffice to usher Felker’s decision here within the California Supreme Court’s definition of a 9 discretionary act. Consequently, Defendants have not met their burden of showing that Felker is 10 immune.

11 Furthermore, Defendants’ argument that Wright and Foulk also enjoy immunity 12 because “they participated in the decision-making process and made recommendations for 13 changes in programming based on relevant intelligence collected during the course of the 14 investigation” also fails to distinguish their involvement from “routine duties incident to the 15 normal operations of the office,” and thus not immune as a discretionary act. See Barnes, 24 Cal.
16 4th at 685. As such, Defendants’ motion for summary judgment pursuant to California 17 Government Code § 820.2 as to Felker, Wright and Foulk on Mitchell’s state law claims is 18 denied.

19 IV. CONCLUSION

20 For the foregoing reasons Defendants’ motion for summary judgment is 21 GRANTED IN PART AND DENIED IN PART. The Court hereby orders:

- 22 1. Plaintiff Trujillo’s claim for declaratory and injunctive relief is MOOT and is 23 thus DISMISSED;
- 24 2. Plaintiff Abdullah’s claim for declaratory and injunctive relief is MOOT and is 25 thus DISMISSED;
- 26 3. Defendants’ motion to dismiss Plaintiff Mitchell and Quezada’s claims as 27 moot is DENIED;
- 28 4. Defendants Felker, Vanderville, Owen, Hellwig, Tilton, Foulk and Wright are entitled to qualified immunity as to Plaintiffs' Eighth Amendment claims, and thus their motion for summary judgment as to Plaintiffs' Eighth Amendment claims is GRANTED;

5. Defendants Felker, Vanderville, Owen, Hellwig, Tilton, Foulk and Wright are not entitled to qualified immunity as to Plaintiffs' Fourteenth Amendment claims, and thus their motion for summary judgment as to Plaintiffs' Fourteenth Amendment claims is DENIED;

6. Defendants' summary judgment motion as to Mitchell's IIED claim is DENIED; and

7. Defendants' summary judgment motion as to Mitchell's negligence and NIED claim is DENIED.

IT IS SO ORDERED.
