

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19
20
21
22
23
24
25
26

WJ
FILED
10/30
ENTERED
RECEIVED

OCT 29 2001

WESTERN DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON
CLERK U.S. DISTRICT COURT
AT SEATTLE
DEPUTY

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
WESTERN DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON
AT SEATTLE

100-1672R

VICTOR MENOTTI; THOMAS SELLMAN;
TODD STEDL; ANDREW RUSSELL;
LAUREN HOLLOWAY; RONALD MATYJAS
and DOUG SKOVE,

Plaintiffs,

NO. C00-372R

v.

ORDER GRANTING IN PART AND DENYING IN PART DEFENDANTS'
MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT
AND DENYING PLAINTIFFS'
CROSS-MOTION FOR SUMMARY
JUDGMENT

CITY OF SEATTLE; PAUL SCHELL,
Mayor of Seattle; NORMAN
STAMPER, Chief of Police,
Seattle Police Department;
MICHAEL B. JENNINGS, a Seattle
Police officer; and S.D.
STEVENS, a Seattle Police
officer,

Defendants.

Order BDR ET

ORDER
Page - 1 -

WJ

4

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19
20
21
22
23
24
25
26

ROBERT HICKEY; KENNETH HANKIN;
JENNIFER HUDZIEC; and STEPHANIE
LANE, on behalf of themselves and all others similarly situated,

Plaintiffs,

NO. C00-1672R

v.

THE CITY OF SEATTLE, a
municipality; PAUL SCHELL,
Mayor of the City of Seattle;
NORMAN STAMPER, Former Chief of Police of the City of Seattle,

Defendants.

CAPTAIN JESSE PETRICH,

Plaintiff,

NO. C00-855R

v.

CITY OF SEATTLE and SEATTLE
POLICE DEPARTMENT; JOHN DOE
OFFICER,

Defendants.

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19
20
21
22
23
24
25
25

COLIN CALLAHAN BRYNN; and BRYAN NEUBERG,

Plaintiffs,

NO. C00-2123Z

v.

CITY OF SEATTLE, a municipal corporation; PAUL SCHELL, in his capacity as Mayor of the City of Seattle and as an individual; NORMAN STAMPER, in his capacity as Chief of Police of the City of Seattle and as an individual; EDWARD JOINER, in his capacity as Assistant Chief of the City of Seattle and as an individual,

Defendants.

LIFE HAS MEANING a/k/a MARY ELIZABETH WILLIAMS; ESTELLA WALLACE; DAWN MONTOYA; PATRICIA WATSON; WILLIAM WATKINS; ANDREW BERNHARDT; KEN OLSON and TAMRA R. FOGGY,

Plaintiffs,

NO. C00-1998C

v.

CITY OF SEATTLE; PAUL SCHELL; NORM STAMPER; JOHN DOE #1; JOHN DOE #2; JOHN DOE #3; JOHN DOE #4; JOHN DOE #5; JOHN DOE #6; JOHN DOE #7; JOHN DOE #8; JOHN DOE #9; JOHN DOE #10; JOHN DOE #11; JOHN DOE #12; JOHN DOE #13; JOHN DOE #14; JOHN DOE #15; and JOHN DOE #16, Defendants.

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19
20
21
22
23
24
25
26

MICHAEL CROWLEY,

Plaintiff,

v.

THE CITY OF SEATTLE, a municipal corporation; and JOHN DOE #1 and JOHN DOE #2, in their capacity as police officers or recruits for the City of Seattle and as individuals whose true names are unknown,

Defendants.

NO. C01-336R

THIS MATTER comes before the court on the motion of defendants for summary judgment, and on the cross-motion of plaintiffs for summary judgment. These cases have been consolidated for the purpose of resolving legal issues common to all parties. Having reviewed the papers filed in support of and in opposition to these motions, the court finds that oral argument would not prove useful and rules as follows:

I. BACKGROUND

These consolidated actions arise out of events occurring during the World Trade Organization ("WTO") conference in Seattle from November 30, 1999 to December 4, 1999. Representatives from the 134 member nations gathered to discuss world trade issues, and the President of the United States appeared as well. During the conference, thousands of people also descended on Seattle, many of

A0 72
(Rev. 8/82)

1 them intending to protest the policies and presence of the WTO.
2 The bulk of people converged on a multi-block area of Seattle's
3 downtown core near the convention center. Several groups planned
4 organized marches, while other people chose to protest individu-
5 ally, and still others planned civil disobedience.

6 Another group of protesters had more violent intentions. The 7 day before the conference officially started, protests and vandal-
8 ism began occurring downtown. People spraypainted buildings and 9 broke windows. A crowd gathered around Niketown and pounded
10 windows and nearby cars.

11 On November 30, the conference officially opened, and the 12 number of people in downtown Seattle near the WTO conference
13 swelled to the tens of thousands. Protesters occupied intersec-
14 tions and blocked access - sometimes by chaining themselves to 15 manhole covers. People overturned dumpsters and set fires; ap-
16 proximately 100 people jumped on cars; others threw sticks, metal 17 spikes, and concrete at the police. Some demonstrators pushed and 18 shoved WTO delegates in an attempt to shut down the conference.
19 Others blocked emergency and law enforcement vehicles.

20 The magnitude of the protests and the violence overwhelmed
21 law enforcement resources. The city had to divert resources from 22 the protest clashes to the WTO conference so law enforcement could 23 protect the international delegates. By mid-morning, defendants 24 ordered all delegates to remain in their hotels until order was 25
26

ORDER
Page - 5 -

1 restored. Later in the day, demonstrators slashed tires and 2 looted local businesses. They lit dumpsters on fire and pushed
3 them into police lines.

4 On the afternoon of November 30, the city responded to the 5 chaos by declaring a civil emergency. Mayor Paul Schell
6 ("Schell") also imposed a curfew in downtown Seattle. Unfortu-
7 nately, the violence, property destruction, fires, and arrests
8 continued throughout the afternoon and the night. Protesters
9 pelted officers with sticks, bottles, and debris. One group set
10 a large fire at a main intersection. Another group wreaked havoc 11 on Niketown, this time forcing police to evacuate employees. A 12 different crowd pulled a garbage truck driver from his vehicle,
13 forcing a police rescue. Riots continued through the early hours
14 of the morning.
15

16 During the riots, President Clinton arrived in Seattle.
17 Faced with the prospect of protecting the President, and the need
18 to continue the international conference, Schell signed Emergency
19 Order Number 3 ("Order") in the early morning hours of December 1.
20 The Order established a restricted zone ("zone") in the downtown
21 area. The zone encompassed the convention center where the WTO
22 conference was taking place, nearby hotels where delegates and the 23 President were staying, and a portion of downtown Seattle. The 24 Order affected about 25 city blocks.

25 The text of the Order limited those who could access the zone
26

ORDER
Page - 6 -

1 to (1) delegates and authorized WTO personnel, (2) owners and
2 employers of businesses and other personnel necessary to operate
3 those businesses, (3) residents, and (4) emergency and safety
4 personnel. A later order added city officials and credentialed
5 representatives of the press. The defendants imposed the zone to 6 quell the continuing violence and to provide a secure area for the 7 President, world leaders, and citizens. Demonstrators could
8 continue protesting outside the boundaries of the zone, but safety
9 concerns precluded their entry into the WTO conference area.
10 Schell encouraged businesses within the zone to remain open so the 11 city could return to its normal functions. Despite the Order and 12 the civil emergency, hundreds of demonstrators attempted to enter
13 the zone and were arrested and clashes with police continued.

14
15 The WTO conference concluded its meetings on Friday, December
16 3. On December 4, Schell terminated the civil emergency, includ-
17 ing the curfew and restricted zone. The plaintiffs later filed 18 various complaints that challenged the restricted zone under the 19 First Amendment and Fourteenth Amendment. Other plaintiffs chal-
20 lenged their arrests under the Fourth Amendment and state law.
21 The Court consolidated these causes of action to decide legal 22 issues.

23 II. ANALYSIS

24 Defendants have moved for summary judgment on the following
25 issues: (1) whether the emergency provisions of the Seattle
26

ORDER
Page - 7 -

1 Municipal Code, Chapter 10.02, are constitutional on their face,
2 (2) whether Mayor Schell acted within his authority under the code
3 when declaring a state of emergency, establishing a curfew, and 4 creating a restricted zone, (3) whether Mayor Schell's Order
5 Number 3, which created the curfew and restricted zone, was con-
6 stitutional on its face,¹ (4) whether probable cause existed to 7 arrest individuals who violated the curfew or restricted zone,
8 (5) whether probable cause existed to arrest individuals who 9 obstructed vehicular or pedestrian traffic and failed to disperse, 10 and (6) whether a city policy existed that led to a failure to 11 train or supervise law enforcement officers. Plaintiffs cross-
12 moved for summary judgment on (1) whether Order No. 3 was consti-
13 tutional on its face and (2) whether the Order was constitutional
14 as applied through the creation of the restricted zone.
15

16 Some of the rulings sought by defendants are on issues undis-
17 puted in these cases. Plaintiffs have not challenged the consti-
18 tutionality of the Seattle Municipal Code, and they have not 19 challenged Schell's authority under the code. Plaintiffs also 20 have not challenged the curfew or the state of emergency. Because 21 plaintiffs have not challenged these actions (nor do they intend 22 to challenge them), it is unnecessary for the Court to rule on 23

24
25 ¹Defendants' motion initially sought a ruling on the Order as 26 applied, but defendants have since narrowed their motion to the Order's facial constitutionality.

1 their constitutionality. Defendants' motion on those points will
2 be STRICKEN.

3 A. Defendants' Motion for Summary Judgment on the Facial 4 Constitutionality of Order Number 3

5 Laws that limit speech based on content must meet an exacting
6 strict scrutiny standard. See, e.g., Metromedia, Inc. v. San 7 Diego, 453 U.S. 490, 513-14 (1981). This is because the govern-
8 ment "may not choose the appropriate subject for public dis-
9 course." Id. at 514. Moreover, the government cannot bar expres-
10 sion of a particular viewpoint on a subject. See R.A.V. v. City 11 of St. Paul, 505 U.S. 377 (1992). An ordinance is content-based 12 on its face if the language or the manifest purpose targets
13 speech.⁴ See, e.g., Turner Broad. Sys. v. FCC, 512 U.S. 622, 642-
14 43 (1994); Police Dep't of the City of Chi. v. Mosley, 408 U.S.
15 92, 96 (1972). A law that does not target expression on its face 16 is not content based even if it incidentally affects one group of 17

18 _____
19 ⁴Parties also may challenge a statute on its face for 20 "overbreadth." Broadrick v. Oklahoma, 413 U.S. 601, 615 (1973).
21 Overbreadth challenges acknowledge that a law is constitutional in 22 the plaintiff's situation but nonetheless argue that the provision 23 illegally limits the First Amendment rights of third parties. See, 24 e.g., Brockett v. Spokane Arcades, Inc., 472 U.S. 491, 498 (1985).
25 If the parties to the lawsuit argue that the provision is 26 unconstitutional as applied to them, it is unnecessary for the court to reach an overbreadth challenge. Members of City Council
v. Taxpayers for Vincent, 466 U.S. 789, 802 (1984). The parties here challenge the Order on its face and as applied through creation of the restricted zone, so they do not rely on the rights of third parties not before the Court. Therefore, the Court need not address facial overbreadth.

ORDER
Page - 9 -

1 speakers more than another group when applied neutrally. See Ward
2 v. Rock Against Racism, 491 U.S. 781, 791 (1989); see also Hill v.
3 Colorado, 500 U.S. 703, 719-20 (2000) (law must apply equally to 4 all).

5 The Order, as written, is content-neutral and therefore does
6 not violate the First or Fourteenth Amendment. Order Number 3
7 establishes a restricted zone in the downtown core of Seattle, and 8 the language does not address expression. Dkt # 47, Exh. 10. It
9 establishes the zone to protect WTO delegates, to prevent vio-
10 lence, and to protect those who work and live downtown. Id., Exh.
11 2, Schell Dep., at 38. Orders are not content-based if they limit 12 entrance to a dangerous area to those necessary for the area to 13 function. See United States v. Griefen, 200 F.3d 1256, 1263 (9th
14 Cir. 2000) (access limited in construction zone). Although offi-
15 cials ultimately excluded protesters, docket # 47, Exh. 4, Joiner
16 Dep., at 39-42, there is no evidence that the "manifest purpose"
17 of the city was to quell expression. The defendants' motion for 18 summary judgment on the facial constitutionality of the Order will 19 be GRANTED and plaintiffs' cross-motion will be DENIED.
20

21 B. Plaintiffs' Motion for Summary Judgment on the 22 Constitutionality of the Order as Applied Through 23 the Restricted Zone

24 A law that on its face is content-neutral may still violate
25
26

1 the First Amendment when implemented by authorities.³ See Taxpay-
2 ers for Vincent, 466 U.S. at 803 n.22. Although the government
3 can regulate the time, place, and manner of expression, a restric-
4 tion is valid only if it (1) is content neutral, (2) serves a
5 significant government purpose, (3) is narrowly tailored and (4)
6 allows for ample alternatives for expression. See Ward, 491 U.S.
7 at 791.

8 1. Content Neutral

9 As described above, the Order is facially content-neutral,
10 but the plaintiffs argue that the defendants applied it to improv-
11 erly exclude speech based on content and viewpoint. They claim
12 the defendants favored commercial speech over political speech
13 when they allowed shoppers to enter the zone. However, as defen-14 dants explained, allowing shoppers to enter was an attempt to 15 enable the city to continue functioning as much as possible in the 16 midst of a chaotic situation. Allowing normal operations to 17 continue is not the same as favoring commercial speech. Cf.
18 Metromedia, 453 U.S. at 513 (example of favoring commercial speech
19 when city allowed commercial billboards but not non-commercial 20 billboards). Nor did the defendants discriminate on viewpoint by 21

22
23 ³Plaintiffs' motion challenges the Order and the broader 24 restricted zone "as applied." However, plaintiffs do not challenge
25 the Order or zone as applied to specific individuals. The motion, 26 therefore, is not a classic example of an "as applied" challenge.
It is perhaps more easily understood as a challenge to the Order as implemented in the creation of the restricted zone.

ORDER
Page - 11 -

1 permitting WTO delegates into the zone. Again, the defendants
2 simply allowed the conference to continue as planned and protected
3 the safety of WTO delegates. The Order was applied in a content-
4 neutral manner.

5 2. Significant Government Interest

6 Any content-neutral restriction on speech must serve a sig-
7 nificant government interest. The circumstances in which a law is 8 applied guide the Court's analysis. See Smith v. Avino, 91 F.3d
9 105, 108 (11th Cir. 1996) (government has discretion to act
10 quickly in emergency). "An inherent tension exists between the 11 exercise of First Amendment rights and the government's need to 12 maintain order during a period of social strife." In re Juan C., 13 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 919, 922 (Cal. Ct. App. 1995). While the First
14 Amendment preserves the free exchange of competing ideas in public
15 forums, at the same time, "[t]he invocation of emergency powers
16 necessarily restricts activities that would normally be constitu-
17 tionally protected." United States v. Chalk, 441 F.2d 1277, 1280
18 (4th Cir. 1971).

19
20 The government requires broad discretion in responding to an 21 emergency situation. See, e.g., id. at 1280; see also Smith, 91
22 F.3d at 109. Because "control of civil disorders that may 23 threaten the very existence of the State is certainly within the 24 police power of government," free speech must sometimes bend to 25 public safety. Chalk, 441 F.2d at 1279, quoting Stotland v. Penn-
26

1 sylvania, 398 U.S. 916, 920 (1970). The government's actions
2 during a state of emergency are valid if reasonably necessary to 3 preserve order. See Smith, 91 F.3d at 109; Chalk, 441 F.2d at 4 1281. The traditional test is whether defendants acted in good
5 faith and with some reason for their actions. See Chalk, 441 F.2d
6 at 1281; Cougar Business Owners Ass'n v. State, 97 Wn.2d 466, 647
7 P.2d 481 (1982).

8 The Court finds that the defendants properly applied their 9 emergency powers by implementing the restricted zone. Safety is 10 recognized as a significant government interest, as are the First
11 Amendment rights of WTO delegates. See generally Grieffen, 200
12 F.3d 1256; see also Perry v. Los Angeles Police Dep't, 121 F.3d
13 1365, 1369 (9th Cir. 1997). Plaintiffs have not challenged the 14 existence of an emergency. Nor is there any evidence that the 15 defendants acted in bad faith when implementing the Order. The 16 evidence is only that Schell and the other defendants hoped to 17 protect the WTO delegates, the President, and the public.

18 Finally, the evidence shows that the defendants had reason to 19 implement the zone. The police had faced violent clashes with 20 protesters for nearly 24 hours, and there is no evidence that the 21 violence was expected to subside. Moreover, the President had 22 just arrived in Seattle and intended to appear at the WTO confer-
23 ence. WTO delegates had faced assaults the prior day and were 24 required to travel again from their hotels to the conference
25
26

ORDER
Page - 13 -

1 center on the coming days. Chaos and vandalism continued un-
2 abated.

3 The Ninth Circuit in Griefen upheld a similar restricted zone
4 in a non-emergency situation. 200 F.3d at 1256. The government
5 blocked all people - including protesters - from a construction
6 site for safety reasons. Id. at 1262. The only persons allowed
7 into the site were those necessary for it to function. Id.
8 Protesters and the public were required to remain outside the 9 construction boundaries. Id. Just as in Griefen, the Seattle
10 zone allowed in only those necessary for the city to carry on its 11 normal functions: WTO delegates, business owners and customers, 12 and employees and other limited groups. Everyone else, protester
13 or not, remained outside.

14
15 Griefen's reasoning is even more pertinent during an emer-
16 gency. The panel touched on the broad powers required during 17 emergencies, saying "we have no doubt" that the government can 18 temporarily close "a street engulfed in a riot or an unlawful 19 assembly." Id. at 1263. In addition, "vandalism can hardly be 20 characterized as activity protected by the First Amendment." Id.
21 at 1262. The defendants in the current case faced ongoing vandal-
22 ism, riots, and violence that justified creation of the zone.

23 The plaintiffs argue that the emergency powers cases do not 24 apply, and that Collins v. Jordan controls. 110 F.3d 1363 (9th
25 Cir. 1997). In deciding whether the defendants could claim quali-

26 ORDER

Page - 14 -

1 fied immunity in a lawsuit, the Collins court held that it was 2 unreasonable for the defendants to believe that during a state of 3 emergency San Francisco could ban all protests throughout the 4 entire city. Id. at 1371. The court reached this decision al-
5 though violent outbreaks had occurred during demonstrations the 6 prior night, and authorities feared additional violence. Id. at 7 1372. "The law is clear that First Amendment activity may not be 8 banned simply because prior similar activity led to or involved
9 instances of violence." Id.

10 Collins differs greatly from the current case. Unlike Col-
11 lins, the violence and riots were continuing unabated in Seattle
12 at the time the defendants issued the Order and implemented the 13 zone. The defendants did not base their decisions solely on past
14 events; rather, they reacted to the chaos that continued to occur
15 even after the imposition of a curfew and in light of the presence
16 of the President and foreign dignitaries. Nor did the defendants 17 ban all protests throughout the city as did the defendants in 18 Collins. Instead, the defendants created a circumscribed zone
19 surrounding the WTO conference and allowed demonstrations anywhere
20 else downtown and in the city at large. While the Court recog-
21 nizes that "[t]he generally accepted way of dealing with unlawful 22 conduct that may be intertwined with First Amendment activity is 23 to punish it after it occurs," Id. at 1371-72, the amount of 24 violence and number of protesters in the Seattle downtown core
25

26
ORDER
Page - 15 -

1 precluded such a course of action. The defendants acted properly
2 within the scope of their emergency powers when implementing the 3 zone, and the establishment of the zone clearly served a legiti-
4 mate government purpose.

5 3. Narrowly Tailored

6 In addition, the Court finds that the emergency order was 7 narrowly tailored so as to constitute a valid time, place, and 8 manner regulation. The government need not create a tight fit
9 between the policy goals and the policy it implements, although it
10 must not use measures broader than necessary. See, e.g., Madsen
11 v. Women's Health Ctr., 512 U.S. 753, 771-72 (1994) (small buffer 12 zone narrowly tailored, larger zone not narrowly tailored); Bay 13 Area Peace Navy v. United States, 914 F.2d 1224, 1228 (9th Cir.
14 1990). Defendants did not restrict more speech than necessary in 15 Seattle. The Order, as implemented, affected only a section of 16 downtown and not the entire city. Compare Madsen, 512 U.S. at 771
17 (small protected zone was narrowly tailored), with Collins, 110
18 F.3d at 1372 (citywide ban on protests too broad). The zone
19 covered only enough territory for the WTO delegates and the Presi-
20 dent to move safely from their hotels to the convention and lasted
21 only during the conference.
22

23 4. Ample Alternatives

24 Finally, the zone allowed ample alternatives for expression.
25 While an alternative that does not allow speakers to reach their 26

1 intended audience does not suffice, See United States v. Baugh,
2 187 F.3d 1037, 1044 (9th Cir. 1999); Bav Area, 914 F.2d at 1229,
3 the demonstrators in Seattle could reach their audiences. They
4 could protest just outside the boundaries of the zone and anywhere
5 else in the city. Moreover, they had access to the media and to 6 the public beyond the zone. The measure as implemented was a
7 valid time, place, and manner regulation.⁴ The plaintiffs' cross-
8 motion for summary judgment is DENIED.

9
10 C. Defendants' Motion for Summary Judgment on Probable Cause to Arrest

11 Summary judgment is appropriate only if there is no genuine
12 issue of material fact. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56. The defendants
13 request a ruling that law enforcement officers had probable cause
14 to arrest those who violated the Order and who obstructed vehicle
15 or pedestrian traffic after failing to disperse. To the extent
16 defendants seek a ruling that there is probable cause to arrest
17 persons who law enforcement officers believe are breaking the law,
18 this is simply a reiteration of the principle of probable cause
19

20
21 ⁴Plaintiffs also seem to argue that the zone acted as a prior 22 restraint. A prior restraint exists when a government agent
23 prohibits speech before it occurs based on content. See Alexander 24 v. United States, 509 U.S. 544, 550 (1993). As explained, neither 25 the Order's language nor its implementation in the form of the 26 restricted zone discriminated on content or viewpoint, so the measure did not act as a prior restraint. Plaintiffs also claim, without explanation, that their right to freedom of assembly was violated. The Order and zone allowed assemblies to continue and merely regulated the location of the assemblies in light of the emergency. No violation occurred.

ORDER
Page - 17 -

1 rather than an issue appropriate for summary judgment.

2 To the extent defendants seek an application of the probable
3 cause principle to individual cases, plaintiffs have raised fac-
4 tual disputes that preclude summary judgment. They have provided
5 evidence that dispersal warnings may not have been clear, that 6 statutory exceptions may have applied to demonstrators' behavior,
7 and that intent is a key element in the alleged crimes. As proba-
8 ble cause is a fact-intensive inquiry that could turn on these 9 disputed elements, the decision is more appropriate for the trier
10 of fact. See McKenzie v. Lamb, 738 F.2d 1005, 1008 (9th Cir.
11 1978). The defendants' motion for summary judgment will be DE-
12 NIED.

13
14 D. Defendants' Motion for Summary Judgment on Failure to Train or Supervise

15 A municipality may be liable under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for 16 failure to train or supervise only if its failure reflects a
17 "deliberate indifference." See Bryan County Comm'rs v. Brown, 520
18 U.S. 397, 409-10 (1997); City of Canton, Ohio v. Harris, 489 U.S.
19 378, 388-89 (1989). Plaintiffs have provided no evidence that 20 defendants had a policy of failing to train or supervise or that 21 defendants acted with deliberate indifference. At best, plain-22 tiffs provide evidence that some law enforcement officers may have 23 used excessive force and may not have received adequate training.
24 These facts do not rise to the level of deliberate indifference.
25

26
ORDER
Page - 18 -

1 Defendants' motion for summary judgment will be GRANTED.

2

3

III. CONCLUSION

4

5

6

The court GRANTS in part and DENIES in part defendants' motion for summary judgment and DENIES plaintiffs' motion for summary judgment.

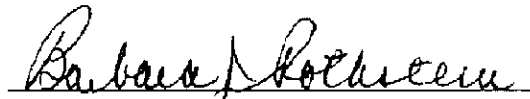

7

8

DATED at Seattle, Washington this 29th day of October, 2001.

9

10

BARBARA JACOBS ROTHSTEIN
UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE

11

12

13

14

15

16

17

18

19

20

21

22

23

24

25

26

ORDER
Page - 19 -